TRACE the season's fashions back to their fabric source and in Velveteens you arrive at the very birthplace of the industry in this country—the Crompton mills in the old Rhode Island Village of Crompton.

Crompton Velveteens, long recognized to be the finest in quality, are now enriched by the new Crompton Finish; soft, sinuous, silky, with a lustre which makes all other velveteens seem flat and dead. The colors, too, are fast and the deep, rich pile, securely held in place by our twill back construction, is practically wear-proof.

It is a guarantee of satisfaction to have one's suits and dresses, gowns and wraps made of—

SHOP EARLY; SHIP EARLY

Obey Washington

Already, Vogue has filled thousands of Christmas orders. Acting upon the Government's official request, Vogue selected, published, and has shipped to its readers quantities of the Christmas gifts which were shown in its October and November issues.

This number is the last that will contain a showing of Christmas gifts. You should have bought yours before now. But if you have still some unfilled items on your list, we urge upon you the instant selection and ordering of those which you wish to purchase. Do not delay a day. Select your gifts. Follow carefully the detailed instructions for ordering on page 60 of this issue. Send your letter immediately.

Thus, and thus only, you will insure getting what you want, having it arrive by Christmas, and relieving the postoffice and railways from a load of Christmas business that it is impossible for them to handle in war times.

Turn Now to the Christmas Gifts Pages Order at Once, to Secure First Choice

Vogue is a shopping expert. It handles the gift lists of thousands of women every year. It has rare opportunities, advance information, special price concessions.

Every bit of its knowledge and influence has been employed in choosing these Christmas gifts. They are really correct; they represent the best of the year's selection; they really give you value received for every dollar of your investment.

Furthermore, this year they are above all things practical. Charming trifles, dainty extravagances, are taboo in war time. Blouses, handkerchiefs, umbrellas, neckwear, boudoir jackets, house-gifts, gifts for children, gifts within the size and weight required for soldiers on service, useful gifts for overseas workers—these are the mainstays of Vogue's Christmas selection this year.

Turn now to the Christmas gifts pages. Note the rules for ordering. Make out your list now, and cooperate with the Government by sending your gifts early and leaving the railroads free in December to haul munitions and coal.

The Gift Useful Hosiery.

Silken hose have risen to the dignity of a major accessory in the scheme of the well dressed woman's gowning. Each kind of hose is significant with special fitness for a particular costume or occasion. Both color and design are given studious attention to complete a symphonic whole.

From the collection of Bonwit Teller & Co. hosiery may be chosen—types that will delight the fancy feminine—nothing is more acceptable as a Christmas Gift. There are so many kinds that are "different" from the monotonous commonplaces, so many originations and unusual treatments that the gift of hosiery will carry not only the spirit and sentiment of giving but will suggest as well the exercise of individual expression.

In the assemblage of Imported Paris Hose are examples of the most exquisite artistry in design and needlework. Black and white hosiery in various patterns of Chantilly lace, Point à l'Aiguille and Point d'Angleterre, also hand embroidery motifs and openwork effects. $18.50 to $95.00 the pair.

The Vogue of Openwork Hosiery of American Make is given an extreme latitude, featuring openwork in-steps, clox and lace inserts in black, white and all the leading shades of the season. $2.25 to $8.50 the pair.

Plain silk hose in sheer, medium and heavy weight in leading shades for street and evening wear. Reinforced with mercerized or lisle lined garter welts. $1.50 the pair; six pairs, $8.75. $1.75 the pair; six pairs, $10.25. $2.50 the pair; three pairs, $7.45. $3.50 the pair; three pairs, $10.35.

Wool Hose for golf and general outdoor service in heather, brown and gray mixtures; also silk and wool mixtures. And white wool with hand-embroidered clox in effective color contrasts. $1.50, $2.50, $3.50 and $4.50 the pair.

The Guiding Spirit

The spirit of victory depends upon morale. Morale depends upon keeping up one's spirit. Since the war opened it has been the mission of America's leading humorous weekly to send abroad its message of cheer each week. With a constantly increasing circulation and an original pictorial display it reflects the home atmosphere. If you have not already sent a year's subscription as a Christmas gift to some friend or friends, obey that impulse and do so at once. The double Christmas Number, price 25 cents (included in all annual subscriptions that commence not later than December 1), out on Tuesday, December 3.

"The Personal Writing Machine"

There will be fewer Coronas for Christmas giving this year.

Because Corona is light in weight—six pounds—because it folds into small compass for travel, and because it is, above all, exceptionally strong, simple, and practical, it has been in demand for all types of military service, from the moment of our entry into war. Many thousand Coronas are already overseas; and for the moment, the greater part of our output is spoken for.

But if your dealer cannot supply you now, he will shortly be able to—perhaps even before "The Pen of the Army" becomes again "The Personal Writing Machine." And whether you plan to use Corona at home, or at the office, or on your travels, you can derive from its record in war a satisfying conviction as to its dependability and wide usefulness in the manifold arts of peace.

REDUCE Easily & Naturally

Three slices of Basy Bread a day - -
Reduces your weight in a natural way

What one woman says:
Doctors' Essential Foods Co.
Orange, N. J.

Gentlemen: In several of your letters to me you state that "when reduced to normal we advise you how to remain so permanently without cost or trouble", and since I have reduced to normal by the use of your bread, I would ask you to kindly give me this advice. I weighed 181½ pounds when I started to use your bread, and I now weigh 137 pounds, and that according to your schedule is the proper weight, as I am five feet six inches tall. If you would give me this advice I would greatly appreciate it. (Signed) Miss J. E.

Your friends must have told you about Basy Bread, now recognized as the standard weight reducing ration. Basy Bread is not a medicine or drug, but a wholesome and delicious food, scientifically prepared. By simply eating three slices of Basy Bread a day, thousands of people have regained their normal weight. No dieting. No medicine. No irksome exercise. You will be very much interested in the Basy Booklet, which is an authoritative statement on Obesity, its cause and cure. Write for your copy today.

DO YOU LIKE TO EAT BREAKFAST?

If not—are you sure it's the coffee?

Imagine starting the day in a sunshiny room like this, with a lovely old Chinese paper on the walls—garden-color and bird cheerfulness against a delicate cream ground.

The graceful old Sheraton mahogany, the chair seats of vermilion leather, the interesting knife boxes, the narrow-stripped mirror sconces like quaint old lanterns— isn't it a room that would put you right with a promising world before you even got your grapefruit?

You don't want to copy it exactly—that would be photography, not art — but doesn't it give you a suggestion or two for your own dining room—dignity, spaciousness, cheerfulness, charm?

That's what House & Garden always does. In meeting House & Garden, you get all picturesque America on your visiting list.

These 5 issues of House & Garden

Six, if you mail the coupon now

For $1

Christmas House Number December

(Extra complimentary copy.)

Dressing the tree on a war income would be somewhat of a problem to all of us if House & Garden didn't come to the rescue with pages and pages of gifts—for the soldier—for the house—for each other—plant gifts that last for weeks—all in the Christmas House Number.

Furniture Number January

Furniture silhouettes vary from year to year—the shrug-shouldered French, the bluff Jacobean, the Victorian with its mitts and its curls and its evasions, the Oriental, the mission, the modernist. House & Garden tells you just who's who in the world of wicker and lacquer and mahogany, and approximately how long a mode will last, and why. Rugs, furniture, curtains, china, linens—everything your house would shop for if it had a day off, will be found in House & Garden.

House Fittings Number February

Hangings on the wall—the screen in decoration—couch-end tables—plasterwork—colonial doors and shutters—such things give life and individuality to the house, and each of them will have two pages devoted to itself. There will be sketches of colonial interiors, too; a new sort of article on Japanese art, a little chat on colour, a page on how to transform impossible lamps—and all sorts of other interesting things, from mezzotints to fireless cookers.

Spring Gardening Guide March

Concentrated wisdom for gardeners is packed in this number: the Spring Planting Tables; a résumé of all the leading annuals and perennials with advice on how to use them most effectively. And—most important of all to the woman war-gardener—a careful analysis of just how much of each vegetable you should plant. From fifty feet of beans, say, you should get so many quarts. Such a percentage will be eaten fresh-cooked; from the residue you should get so many cans.

Interior Decorating Number April

Haven't you often puzzled over just what fabrics to put with certain types of wallpaper? House & Garden begins a monthly showing of appropriate papers and fabrics together, in this number. Stone fireplaces are considered too, besides lamps, window shades and tassels, books in the guest room; the troublesome stair landing. And there is a most helpful "don't" article.

Spring Furnishing Number May

The house yawns in the spring, wakes up, and opens all its windows. You need new paper on the walls, new porch furniture and rugs, new hangings for your bedrooms. House & Garden will give you two pages on each of these, together with articles on the use of heraldry in decoration, fireplace stools, and the furnishing of a man's study. Magazine stands, wall pockets, desks and their placing, the kitchenette, the upstairs hall—why, you can't think of anything you want to know that won't be in the May number. But just in case you should—there's the inexhaustible patience of the Information Service.

Radium and Beauty

The amazing power of Radium now is turned to Beauty's aid in the daintiest of toilet preparations

What has Radium to do with Beauty?

Let Science answer. Science has discovered in Radium a revolutionary Beauty Secret.

Consult the Scientific books on Radium in any public library; or turn to the "Book of Knowledge". You will find that Radium is a source of Energy a million times greater than any other known.

The tiniest particle of Radium throws off a continuous stream of Energy Rays, from one year's end to the next, never stopping—never diminishing. Celebrated physicians have proved what this amazing Energy will do for the human skin. Radium Rays, in fact, are "accepted by the human system as harmoniously as is sunlight by the plant." They are a Power for Betterment.

"Radior" Toilet Requisites are the first and only toilet preparations to contain a definite quantity of Actual Radium. (See "Radior" $5,000 Guarantee.)

"Radior" Toilet Requisites are used in England by noted ladies of title and fashion. They are the vogue in leading shops. They are now presented to America.

Each the formula of a noted specialist, you would choose "Radior" Preparations for themselves alone—for the silky smoothness of the creams—the exquisite fineness of the powders—and for their haunting, tantalizing fragrance—an exclusive perfume of our own, not sold in any market.

With the unique power of Radium added, "Radior" Preparations stand unrivalled as aids to Beauty.

Ask for "Radior" Toilet Requisites at the leading stores, or write to us if you have any difficulty finding them. The prices are hardly as high as you would expect.

Meantime avail yourself of the full details concerning this "new Beauty knowledge." Write today for our booklet—"Radium and Beauty", a revision of a book by C. Acey, of which one hundred and twenty thousand have already been distributed in England.

Mail the coupon for a complimentary copy before our first American edition is exhausted.

OVINGTON'S

519 A gaily colored bird and brilliant flowers are shown resplendent on this jet black china lamp. A blue parchment shade (10 in. in dia.) is marked with patches of midnight sky across which another colored bird takes flight. 16 in. high. $10.00.

494 A "nest" of ash trays, four deep, is topped with a match-box holder carried by the largest. Each tray has a cigar rest, and all are glass with nickel rims. Together, $5.00.

533 In brass, brightly finished, this Cape Cod fire-lighter will cheerfully remind you of your agreeable duty to burn wood and save coal. Complete, with tray, $5.00.

552 Open vegetable dish of hand hammered Sheffield. Measures 7 in. x 10 in. long. $5.00.

515 The delicate colored flowers, the finely wrought band of black and white lines, and the gold edges of this white china tea-set, consisting of six tea-cups and saucers, tea-pot, sugar-bowl, and cream pitcher, make it a good $10.00 value. Our price on our present stock is only, a set $5.00.

645 Sheffield combines every advantage of beauty and durability so successfully that you find it constantly being made to serve new purposes. Here it is in a handsome desk set, massive, dignified, and practical—richly decorated in an old Dutch silver design. It includes seven pieces: Pad (16 in. x 21 in. with four corner pieces), ink-well, stamp box, calendar, paper rack, roll blotter pen tray. Complete, $35.00.

EVERY year there is a new situation at the holidays. But the spirit of Christmas is always the same. Every year you find at Ovington's the very gifts that meet the situation. This year there is more emphasis on usefulness than ever before. But the same ingenious spirit of novel originality runs through everything you see here—just as it always has.

649 Japanese bronze work decorated with inlaid cloisonné work in colors is a very old art and only a few more pieces are to be had. The floor lamp shown is an exquisite example of this beautiful work. The shade, 26 in. in dia., is of parchment in bronze color, with a conventional colored design to match the cloisonné on the lamp. An exceedingly attractive combination at $75.00.

505 No candy is too good for this jar, and half a pound is not too much. Wrought for crystal, with alternating frosted and plain strips, and decorated with a hammered Sterling silver band. $5.00.

631 A quaint little lady lamp 10½ in. high which will brighten your boudoir. Her head and shoulders are of china, and her silk dress, with a hat to match, may be blue or rose. $7.50.

655 This swinging photograph frame on pedestal finished in antique gold, hand-carved design, view 8 in. x 10 in., is an exceptional value at $3.50.

632 An exceptional value is this pair of Sterling silver salt and pepper shakers in their fitted case, at only, the pair, $2.50.

630 The exquisite shape of this bowl for flowers or fruit is enhanced by its coloring—either blue or yellow iridescent glass, 12½ in. in dia. It is supported by a stand of black glass. $3.50.

622 Very quaint candlesticks finished in antique gold, decorated with a carved design in polychrome colors; 12 in. high; candles to match candlesticks. Complete, per pair, $12.50.

WHY THE WALTHAM IS PREFERABLE TO THE FOREIGN SMALL WATCH

This very small watch movement, the size of a ten cent piece, is made by the exact standardization process. This is the reason that Waltham has been able to produce a small ladies' watch guaranteed to keep correct time.

With foreign watches, so much work is done by hand on parts that uniformity and time-keeping qualities are uncertain.

NEW BOOKS!

The Kaiser As I Know Him

By ARTHUR N. DAVIS

Vivid pen-pictures of the Great Enemy of Democracy in action, painted by a man who was for fourteen years the German Kaiser's personal dentist.

The book throws blinding light upon the question of the Kaiser's responsibility for the war, upon his fore knowledge of the destruction of the "Lusitania,"—upon the thousand and one vital questions to which Americans want the answer.

Illustrated. Crown 8vo, Cloth, $2.00

Yesterdays In a Busy Life

By CANDACE WHEELER

The founder of the Decorative Art Society tells in these pages of the ninety-odd years of her busy life and of the hosts of famous men and women with whom she has come in contact, among whom were John Lafarge, Samuel Coleman, Carroll Beckwith, William Chase, Blashfield, Macmonnies, French, Millet, Alma-Tadema, Abbey, and Mark Twain.

Illustrated. Cloth, Crown 8vo, $3.00

A Writer's Recollections

By MRS. HUMPHRY WARD

A granddaughter of Doctor Arnold, of the Rugby of Tom Brown's day, and a niece of Matthew Arnold, the poet, Mrs. Ward, the well-known novelist, has lived her whole life in the heart of that part of English society from which the best literature of her day proceeded, and has been personally acquainted with most of the great authors of the Victorian period. Her recollections have to do with her girlhood contacts with such figures as the Wordsworths, Newman, Walter Pater, Arthur Hugh Clough, and the Brownings.

Illustrated, 2 vols. Crown 8vo, Cloth, Rough Edges, Gilt Tops, $6.00

Memories—Grave and Gay

By FLORENCE HOWE HALL

The well-known author, lecturer, and daughter of Julia Ward Howe tells here the story of her interesting life. She has anecdotes to relate of Kossuth, Thackeray, Longfellow, Charles Sumner, Kane, the Arctic explorer, Arthur Hugh Clough, Charlotte Cushman, Frederika Bremer, Edwin Booth, George Bancroft and many others.

Illustrated. Cloth, Regular 8vo, $3.50

The Lure of Music

By OLIN DOWNES, Music Critic of "The Boston Post"

A book for every one who loves music. The author puts the love and understanding of good music within the reach of all, dispensing with technical terms and bringing the human appeal of the art home to every reader. He deals first of all with the personalities of the great composers, giving also the plots of many famous operas. Each chapter is illustrated musically by Columbia records, carefully chosen by Mr. Downes.

Illustrated. Crown 8vo, Cloth, $1.50

Little Friend of All the World

FROM the tip of his eager tail to the point of that one black ear, he's clear ginger with fur on. He's never tired, or bored, or sulky. From the time he gets up in the morning till lights-out, life is just one mad joy after another—cats, dogs, bones, bands, dinner.

He likes everybody that's worth liking—and everybody reciprocates with enthusiasm. But he loves one man with all the strength of his doggy heart—and that man's his master. If the man's a woman, so much the luckier for her.

If you've never seen absolute unquestioning adoration in a pair of brown eyes—if you've never owned a dog that thought you ruled heaven by divine right—we're sorry for you.

But you don't need to remain unloved. The Vanity Fair Dog Mart knows the addresses of all the kennels that breed only the best. If you don't care for wire-haired terriers—it's hard to realize it, but there are such people—then just read down the list on the coupon below and mark the sort of heart-adventure you prefer.

And—just in case—you'd better do it right now.

Oaksmere

Mrs. Merrill's School for Girls

Mrs. Merrill takes pleasure in announcing the acquisition of an adjoining property consisting of ten buildings and thirty-five acres that gives Oaksmere one of the most complete equipments of any private girls' school in the country.

Oaksmere offers three courses of study. The "Oaksmere Course," a carefully planned curriculum including both cultural and vocational branches, is designed to fit the modern girl for a future of useful service. This course, which stresses particularly the necessity of providing a practical outlet for every department of study, gives stimulating opportunity to the student for creative work in musical composition, writing, dancing, costume designing, the dramatic, fine and applied arts.

The "College Preparatory Course" offers the girl who plans to enter college a thorough preparation, under college-trained women. Special attention is given to developing in the student the power to handle intelligently and independently the subject-matter of her courses,—the fundamental principle governing the new comprehensive examinations now required for admission to Mt. Holyoke, Smith, Vassar, and Wellesley,—as well as to the type of work demanded by the special entrance examinations required by other colleges.

The "Graduate Course" offers to graduates of High Schools or private preparatory schools thorough specific training in music, the dramatic arts, business and secretarial theory and practice, household arts, mothercraft, and Red Cross courses with special hospital work.

In addition to these three departments, Oaksmere is now equipped with an up-to-date "Intermediate School," in which girls of seven to fifteen are offered, under a special director, the best grade-school methods known to modern education.

References are required. A descriptive booklet will be mailed on request.

The Next Generation

must show a marked improvement over the present one if America is to occupy the world position we are all planning for her.

No slur intended on thee and me, but let us be honest with each other and admit that the War is showing up the early educational training of most of us in a truly painful fashion.

We can soothe our wounded pride by remembering the more or less sketchy presentation of the most important subjects which was offered us by our private schools a number of years ago. There is no excuse in the world, however, for our sons and daughters ever finding themselves thus geographically lost, for school methods have changed materially—one of the notably good reforms of the past few years.

Do you want your child to be able to give international affairs, as brought before him or her in the daily paper, his intelligent attention? The best way to insure this is to choose at once the school that devotes itself to the development of the young brain along the lines that you consider most essential.

Get your initial ideas from these columns and then let the Vogue School Service furnish you with details.

DON'T FORGET THE POOR YOU HELPED BEFORE THE WAR

YOU'VE sent your Christmas contribution to the Red Cross, of course; you've subscribed to the seven recreational organizations that work overseas; you've not forgotten the Fatherless Children of France or the Belgian Babies; you've given records to the Phonograph Records Recruiting Corps, and books to the Library Association, and field-glasses to the Navy, and warm clothes to far-away refugees in devastated France. In fact, you've remembered all the new brave causes, the new pitiful sufferers. But—

THE POOR THAT ARE ALWAYS HERE

It may be that you've forgotten the little Christmas things you used to do before the War. Have you thought of the-poor-ye-have-always-with-you that the Charity Organization looks after year by year, the patient-faced old people in the Homes; the little white hospital beds—row on row—that are filled by the sick for whom nobody subscribes because they're just civilians, and none too brave about their sorrows—no braver than you?

Don't you remember the turkeys that used to go into the white baskets laid out on the big kitchen table when you were just able to reach them by standing on your tiptoes? Don't you remember how cook let you help pack them, especially the one for the little lame cobbler who swore—and lived all alone? And Janie whose father drank—there was a basket for her, too, with your own Victoria Mary that you'd cried over, shutting her blue eyes obediently in the upper left-hand corner.

Don't you remember the ride through the white Christmas Eve—real sleigh-bells ajingle—and the light that streamed out of the cobbler's wee cottage? And Janie, afraid to believe, with her face in Victoria Mary's curls?

Don't do all your Christmas giving this year for the new brave—the new poor—the new sorrowful. And don't do it all in bills, through a Committee. The turkey-in-the-basket days were happiest because you gave more than money. You gave time, and thought, and smiles, and Victoria Mary, and—yes, the best of it—you didn't dance on Christmas Eve. You went with the baskets in the sleigh.

TWO THOUSAND WHITE DECEMBERS

After all— isn't it so?—the most wonderful thing about the Wonderful Babe whose birthday we've kept so strangely—so selfishly—through all these two thousand white Decembers—the most wonderful thing about Him was that He didn't send a gift to us—He came to us Himself.

MAJOR AND MRS. THOMAS HITCHCOCK

Major and Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock, who are always present at the amateur race meets, are shown at the sixteenth annual Piping Rock Horse Show. Mrs. Hitchcock is an unusual horse-woman and always rides at these events, taking her horses over the jumps in competition with the most expert horsemen. Major Hitchcock is commander of the training department at the Mineola Aviation Field. Their son, Lieutenant Thomas Hitchcock, junior, is a member of the Lafayette Escadrille and was one of the first young Americans to go to the front. Last winter he brought down two German fliers and received the Croix de Guerre with two palms and the prize money awarded by the Escadrille for bravery. Later he was taken prisoner by the Germans and for some time it was not known whether he was alive or dead. After several months he escaped from a German prison camp, walking eighty miles through German territory and arriving safely at the Swiss border. Recently he received a third palm for having been brought down behind the enemy lines

When the twenty-fifth of December sees a red sun climb up over tired hills, it will be the thought of Stella, and Blanche, and Miss Evie, and the rest of the front-line trenchmen of the Over-There Theatre League that will draw soldiers miles through mud to hear the songs that Broadway hums, half a world away

PLAYING THE FRONT FOR CHRISTMAS

THE long narrow hall was jammed with benches, and the benches were jammed with navy blue backs—full twelve hundred of them—clean up to the edge of the giddy crimson and gold curtain that hid the stage. An irrepressible blue back in front of the mechanical piano helped that hero of a hundred fights to do its worst and joyfully urged the assembled Navy to a tickle-toeful accompaniment. This we saw in the instant we rounded the corner into the hall; then, as though an unseen officer had sung out an order, the whole audience right-about-faced and gave us the benefit of its grinning countenance.

Stella led the line of girls that made their way up the side aisle to the dressing-room, and Stella, as you'd be the first to agree, was quite enough to upset any Navy's circulation.

We were an Over-There Theatre League unit on its way to the front, via Ellis Island,—that is Stella, and Blanche, and Louise, and Elizabeth, and Miss Evie were the unit. The rest of the line consisted of special-permit civilian spectators (quite negligible) who wanted to follow the unit to the very edge of the continent so as to see as far as might be into the haze that would swallow it when it started for France. Christmas was coming, and, since the boys couldn't get home, America was sending more than a hundred entertainers to Europe. And this unit played Ellis Island as its last one-night stand on the road to Paris.

THE LAST STAND ON THE ROAD TO PARIS

"Dead?" said Elizabeth the pianist, shedding the hat that covered her ash blonde head, once the dressing-room curtain had stopped swaying to the tune of a long nautical sigh twelve hundred strong. "I packed till three-thirty last night, then I got up at six-thirty and packed some more, and ran around town getting things I'd forgot. Of course, I'm glad I came over to-night—but tired!"

Miss Evie eased a slim arm out of her coat. "That inoculation hurts like blazes—arm's swelled down to the wrist—but it's all in the day's work. I'm game for it if you are."

Our Over-There Theatre League Sends More Than a Hundred Entertainers to Carry The Footlights of Broadway over to France

By BETTY D. THORNLEY

"Personally, I shouldn't mind packing or inoculation," Blanche observed with a yawn. "But that passport office made me bring everything from my birth certificate to a deed for the family plot in the cemetery."

But here the Navy came to say the civilian spectators' bench was placed and would the occupants please occupy? Two minutes later the crimson and gold curtains slid back, for there's precious little time for dressing with an audience that says "Sit down, you gob," every time a man moves, for fear it will lose sight of your entrance.

One has confused memories of that show because not more than half of it was on the stage. For instance, who could think of the climax of Miss Evie's second coon yarn without hearing the voice of the coxswain in the front seat, raised in a delighted whoop that quite upset the Y. M. C. A. secretary who sat on the stairs? Who could see Stella in her pink chiffons and her frivolous little never-still pink slippers chasing rainbows across the pine-floored stage without a vision of the brown-eyed boy that stood by the piano, adoring? And who can see Blanche stamping high heels in a very ecstasy of jazz and flaring against the sign-painted scenery in her cerise shawl, her black lace scarf, her saucy rose, without adding the tum-tum-shuffle of a thousand feet and the thunderclap of applause that brought her back again and again and again, with brighter eyes and pinker cheeks each time?

WHAT THE NAVY WANTS

What the Navy wanted, undoubtedly, was jazz—ginger—pep. Beauty? Ye-es. But first of all—go, Art? Maybe. But first of all and last of all that sentient thing called personality. Miss Evie wasn't young. But she told stories, she thrummed that guitar, she sang the sort of negro songs where you interject "Hallelujah!" or "Oh, ma Baby" and never miss a beat. She was what the Navy calls a coon shouter. But she was more. She was an artist. Yet it wasn't the art that took the Navy. It was a little way she had of chatting while she pulled a chair out to sit on, a little way of beating time with her left foot, a little way of smiling over her guitar, a little way of quite taking for granted that the fortunes of the man who bet his money on the bob-tailed nag were quite as interesting to you as they seemed to her—a little way of choking up when you came back at her, twelve hundred strong, and simply roared for more about that "sinner a-settin' on the gate ob hell."

A great deal that "goes big" on Broadway would go bigger still in France. But a great deal more wouldn't go at all. For there's no scenery, no lighting, no orchestra, no chorus, no company, no time to do anything but jump in and

These blithe Ford-touring units of five are the mainstays of the League—company, scenery, costumes, "props," and baggage racing along the gullied roads from Hut to Hut begin—and any show, any actor, any actress or singer who can't do without background won't do for France. The quality needed to spell "success" may and does occur in Irene Franklin. It equally may and does occur in the graduate from Yiddish repertoire on the Lower East Side. But without it, one may sigh in vain to serve.

What can he find in his stocking so good as a real laugh? And how is he to get it without the League?

On the other hand, France won't do for anybody, no matter how talented, how full of personality, who isn't able to cut baths to one in three weeks if necessary—and wash her own clothes in cold water. This on the honour of a last summer's recruit to the Over-There Theatre League, just returned.

All of which explains the fact that though the initial meeting of the League at the Palace Theatre last April contained everybody in the profession from George M. Cohan, up and down, practically all the people actually sent over have come from vaudeville, especially from the extreme and generous-souled left wing represented by the recruit already referred to who says she began her career by playing one-night stands in Texas at the age of six.

THE MEETING THAT BEGAN THE LEAGUE

E. H. Sothern addressed that historic meeting at the Palace Theatre and prophesied this very thing from his own experience at the front. The boys wouldn't want Hamlet between bombardments, he said a bit sadly. They wanted—he didn't exactly say they wanted pink chiffons and coon shouters, but that was what it amounted to. And though the directors of the Over-There League are Winthrop Ames, Rachel Crothers, Walter Damrosch, Charles B. Dillingham, John Drew, Daniel Frohman, Joseph R. Grismer, Marc Klaw, Willard Mack, Lee Shubert, E. H. Sothern, Augustus Thomas, and Francis Wilson, led off by George M. Cohan as President and E. F. Albee as Vice-President, the mainstays of the League in the field have been little girls like Stella, some of them with toes scarcely on the ladder of success. And when the twenty-fifth of December sees a red sun climb up over the hills, it will be the thought of these dauntless American girls that will draw tired men to—

It may be to a bridge with both banks lined with audience and Stella chasing rainbows along the coping. It may be to the top of a battered stone wall with Stella begging a kiss for Cinderella through a yawning gap made by a Boche bomb. It may be to a window in a torn French street and Stella tickle-toeing in the shell of a gutted house. All these three stages served, one after another, for a unit that went over in the autumn. This unit gave fourteen shows in two days, on everything from a soap box to a railroad siding. Yet when they wrote home to James Forbes, of "Chorus Lady" fame, who recruits the volunteers for the Over-There Theatre League, assigns them to their units, arranges the routine of the performances, rehearses them, and finally sees them on their way, passported and uniformed and inoculated, they said that he'd been the greatest benefactor that had ever touched their uneventful careers and that they wouldn't exchange places with anybody in the United States. Neither would Mr. Forbes, by the way, although Winthrop Ames is authority for the statement that he's the hardest worked man in the League.

WHERE THERE IS ALWAYS A FULL HOUSE

You see, they're appreciated—heavens, how they are appreciated!

"When they enter a Division," says the Entertainment Director of the Sixth Region, commenting on another unit, "the General makes special plans for the men to get to the show; he sees to the band and has a stage erected in the most convenient gathering place. They have played to twenty thousand people in one day." Much as that means to actors who have put up with so much inconvenience, it can't stand beside a letter like the one received quite unsolicited from a sergeant in the U. S. A. Ambulance Service with the French Army.

"Probably you good people at home don't quite know what a boon this sort of thing is," he says. "You would, though, if you'd listened for months to ambitious and well-meaning folks who love to recite 'Verdun' and other cheerful morsels, and whose idea of a rare treat is to sing consecutively the national anthems of the United States, Great Britain, and France—which, as you realize, does pall a bit. The only thing that ever saved us from the Italian's hymn is that it's too darned difficult for most singers to attack. When we were told that this first unit was merely the advance guard of a mighty army of real American actors, and had the meeting at the Palace explained to us, the boys yelled!"

You can see at a glance why there can't be anything elaborate in the way of scenery, and only the cleverest and most collapsible of "props." You can see, too, why the most popular teams of entertainers are likely to be those that call themselves by such names as "Just Home Folks," "The Shamrock Show," "The Dough Girls," "The Yankee Girls," "The Yankee Doodle Five." You can see, by the way, that five is the topmost limit for a unit, because company, scenery, costumes, "props," and personal baggage—to say nothing of the chauffeurs—must all pack securely into one trusty Ford. Speaking of costumes, the Y. M. C. A. provides the becoming blue uniform with its good-looking cape that all the women wear. This is for traveling and often for playing in as well. The limit of stage costumes is one ordinary evening dress. The Y. M. C. A. also pays all expenses from the time the unit leaves New York. Then the Over-There Theatre League steps in and gives to each performer two whole dollars a day salary, irrespective of what said performer happened to be making before enlisting. Some of them, by the way, classify in the fifteen-hundred-a-week list when they're at home. But when they reach France—one salary for all, and alphabetical billing.

A TYPICAL ITINERARY

"We were first located in a well-known American camp for four days," says one of the few men sent over by the League (a man, needless to say, who could serve in no other way). "Each night we went to a different place. The first two nights we had fine cement buildings that held nearly a thousand men, and the third night we went to a Polish-American camp and, as the hut only held a couple of hundred, we took the piano outside and gave the show for about seven thousand boys. It was one of the greatest sights I've ever seen."

"The other night we went to an advanced American artillery position a few kilometers from the front and had one of the most interesting nights so far. The Americans were brigaded with the Frenchmen forming a fringe on the outside and hanging all over the roofs of the adjoining huts. My piano stool was a good husky board standing on one end, and the Boche and French artillery gave me a real symphonic accompaniment. A little after we got under way three Boche planes came overhead to see the show, but

NEW YORK WEARS ITS HEART ON ITS SLEEVE

The Shop Windows on Fifth Avenue Are Filled
With the Toys of Convalescents and the Spoils
Of War, and Posters and Pictures Flare Everywhere

Mrs. William Woodward's hat of black velvet with its beaver brim supplements a severely simple tailored suit of gray cloth

STRANGE, indeed, are the new uses of the shop windows of Fifth Avenue. As extraordinary as the change that has come over the street itself and the crowds which pass over its long grey length is that which has taken place in the displays behind the great plate glass windows that front the Avenue. Of jewels there are still some to be seen, of porcelains and pretty clothes still bright varied showings, but interspersed with these and crowding them into the background are things altogether new to Fifth Avenue—things which cause the crowds to stand and wonder, to see strange places and to think strange new thoughts. First of all, there are the pictures and posters, many of them badly done, but now and then with a splash of paint red with the horror of war or white with the light of inspiration. There are toys and queer little trifles, tiny things childishly done, telling in every crude line of weak white fingers and minds groping back from dark ways. In one window, against the grey velvet curtain that has formed the background for rare antique furnishings, the great black cross of a German airplane stands out. Banished are the solemnly correct furnishings of a haberdasher's window, and in their place is piled a battered collection of German trophies. The sweetmeat shops beseech the passersby to refrain from eating candies and point to businesslike tins of chocolates and bonbons waiting to be convoyed to men across the seas. Even the tiniest perfume shop or florist's holds out its hand for Belgium or for injured childhood, begging the chance observer to turn from the pretty things they offer to the pitiful things which they are trying to alleviate.

Day and night, the street is a panorama of compelling interest. The Fourth Liberty Loan set the flags a flutter from every window ledge and cornice, set the bands playing at every corner, gave the available men of the Army and Navy occupation for their odd moments, enlisted the services of the Red Cross and the Ambulance Corps, of visiting Allies, and of ordinary everyday citizens. Two small shy daughters of Nippon, sometimes working in combination, but always escorted by one of Uncle Sam's soldiers or sailors, were among the most successful collectors for the loan. All vermilion and gold was the costume one of them wore the day she ventured forth with a blue-clad sailor. Aristocratically black was her kimono and that of her sister on a subsequent afternoon when a huge khaki-clad soldier accompanied them as they solicited bonds from the little booth before the Union League Club.

The pleas of one convalescent soldier were irresistible—to Mrs. William Goadby Loew, at least, as one can see from the photograph accompanying this article. Among the most enthusiastic workers for the Liberty Loan was Elsie Ferguson.

These Picture Hats by Waters for Afternoon And Evening Wear Show Many New Tendencies

Martha Hedman Shows These Hats and the More Elaborate Evening Turbans at Their Best

Just as we thought life was to be simpler, they've given us an evening turban of dull gold lace with two enormous black aigrettes at one side and loops of lace extravagantly long—immoderately Eastern, if one uses them as a veil, but quite as effective if one twists them into a scarf or allows them to hang freely in lissome undraped ends

(Upper right) Another version of the turban is in rose velvet, tight fitting, embroidered all over in twinkling sapphire blue bugles through which the rose velvet shines all the more subtly. There is a knot of the beads in front and a feather fancy of black burnt goose to give shading to one's audacious and quite charming colour scheme

The tailored dark brown silk beaver curve of this hat for evening is belied by the deep gold lace that drapes the under side and is caught by hand-made shell pink flowers of tiny beads. A seductive bit of brown tulle is wound about the crown and plays veil or scarf, as its wearer's whim dictates; and whims are many when the wearer chances to be Martha Hedman of "Boomerang" fame

THE FASHION FADS OF PARIS

IN every age fashion is characterized by certain manias. They tell us that, in order to be pale, the Romans drank infusions of cummin seed which was supposed to possess the attribute of making the face very white. In the eighteenth century, women forced themselves into hard stiff stays boned with wooden slats, and over them they wore huge paniers stuffed with horsehair. The beauties of Winterhalter walked in great hencoops which they called crinolines. In fact, fashion is an autocrat which only the strongest minded women seem able to resist, and the fourth year of the war brings a fad of its own to Paris, a fad for which we can see no motive except pure fancy. This is the fashion of cutting the hair short, a style which is becoming to few women over twenty-five, and not to many under that age. In certain parts of India cutting the hair is a sign of grief at the loss of one's husband. Can it be that, now that their husbands are all at war, women wish to be as unattractive as possible, and have therefore cut off their loveliest asset? Perhaps a more reasonable explanation is that their life has become so active, so full of sudden trips in ambulances, and engagements at hospitals and at all sorts of military organizations, that there really is not sufficient time for an elaborate toilet, and anything that simplifies life is welcome. However, many of the busiest women have retained their long tresses and solved the

The Short Hair-cut, the Enveloping Cape, And Some Details on Evening Gowns, Oc- cupy the Attention of the Parisienne

"All these women cut their hair to imitate each other." And, because she has a fondness for paradox, Jeanne tries to prove to me that there is nothing so exhausting as people who are "different"; both the woman who scorns fashion, and the original thinker who always opposes the majority. She claims that if people were all entirely different from one another, we should have to give far too much attention to each of them, that we should have to make a great deal of every trifle, and that we should end by dying of bewilderment among so many different creations, costumes, and souls.

"Well," I answer her, "you run the risk of dying of laughter, anyway, when you meet Princess So-and-So, whose silhouette has widened with time, shopping for her daughter's trousseau, and see them both with cropped hair like two dear little schoolgirls. And I think you might grow exhausted if you tried to persuade Madame B., who is younger than the Princess, to be sure, but whose face is as thin as a hatchet, that it is not impossible, as she contends, to wear one's hair any other way."

IF THE SHORT HAIR-CUT STAYS WITH US

If the fashion continues in all its present virulence I really wonder whether, in view of all these Florentine heads, it won't be too great a problem for our dressmakers to create any new fashions at all. Only one style of costume, that problem of looking neat by wearing a firm net which keeps every hair in place.

Why is it, then, that women insist upon wearing their hair in the style of "the children of Charles II," when they are no longer children themselves? I have an idea that it is on account of the sudden nocturnal descents to the cellar, to which we all became accustomed during the summer. Long hair would be apt to look rather wild, while short hair could be brought to order far more speedily. Possibly, also, now that the scarcity of hot water makes it impossible to wash the hair as often as usual, it is more sensible to have short hair which can be washed with much less difficulty. So scarce is hot water, alas, that a hot bath is no longer a daily possibility. There are only certain days on which one may have this luxury.

CONCERNING FEMININE REASONING

"Why on earth do you go so far afield for reasons?" asks my blonde friend Jeanne, who is more sophisticated and philosophical than I am.

CHÉRUIT

This afternoon frock of striped black velvet trims itself with "poulain," has a loose panel at the sides, and tucks its collar under its belt in a way that is altogether novel and Parisian. Its sleeves are long and its collar high, since coal is scarce

Madame Terrien has fortified herself against the winter with a cape of Siberian squirrel trimmed with contrasting fur. Her Maria Guy hat is of brown felt and velvet to match the bands on her tulle scarf

Mlle. Cécile Sorel has put her faith in Chanel, of late, and been rewarded by such intriguing things as this coat of black silk jersey and monkey fur. The Marie Louise felt hat, too, is trimmed with monkey (Left) Mlle. Lancret believes, with most of the feminine world, that, after all, there is no friend like blue serge, and especially since it has adapted itself so well to such things as bands and a collar of beige tricot. Here it is a companion, too, for a blue velvet hat bordered with tulle, blue stockings, and dull blue buckled shoes—not to mention the medallion of brilliants on a black moire ribbon of the fifteenth century, is really appropriate to these short tresses, and the couturiers' feeling for harmony may force them to gown all women alike. Then, large or small, thin or fat, women will have to go about looking like badly executed replicas of each other. Cutting one's hair is a rather irrevocable operation, and it behooves one to think well before going in for a fashion which one can not change over night.

Of course, mild crazes have always possessed us. Just at present, capes are the rage. Though they were introduced as long ago as last winter, women have taken them up again with enthusiasm. Each one, however, wears hers in her own manner. Last year the cape was merely a convenient wrap, but this year every woman seems to have worked out a type of her own which suits her silhouette. This is a very interesting departure, for a new mode is more apt to be uniform. The photograph of Mlle. Andral of the Théâtre de l'Odéon gives a good idea of the way in which the cape is worn. A very smart Parisienne is wearing one, made by Lanvin, of cloud grey woollen material with a voluminous collar of silver fox. At the back of the collar there is a fringe of grey chenille, hanging from a sort of trellis of passementerie in grey and falling so far down the back as to elongate the silhouette, giving a slender effect to the figure and following every movement of the body in walking. A hat of brown felt with an immense knot of brown tulle is a charming accompaniment to this cape. A third cape, which struck me as being very good, was worn by Madame E. Terrien at the Ritz at tea-time. The cape, which was of either sable or of dyed squirrel, wrapped her in fur from head to foot and was rich and heavy, with a border of black fox. It was held on the shoulders by a waistcoat of the fox crossed in front. Before the door of her magnificent house, I happened to see Cécile Sorel, whose costumes are from Chanel, a house to which she has long been faithful. Her gown was of silk jersey, attractive in its simplicity, and the originality of the costume consisted of the arrangement of monkey fur which was used not only to border the tunic and the sleeves, but also to finish the neck and in the form of a muff, round as an apple and quite large, in spite of the effort to force little muffs upon us.

After capes, the next most popular feature of the moment is the big beret in black, brown, or taupe velvet—a fashion which every one is wearing. Sometimes it towers high above the wearer's

When fashion chose the straight and narrow path this season, this obedient little dinner gown followed in silver lamé with drawn thread work and silver embroidery as its trimmings head, and at other times it is more modest in size. Many women are carrying here in Paris the canes which they used to reserve for the beaches.

At Paquin's recently I saw the evening gown sketched at the right on this page. It is planned for a little dinner by the imagination of Mlle. Madeleine, of Paquin's. The foundation is silver lamé, and the only trimming is the lines of open-work running in different directions. The effect is very new and pleasing. The sleeve is worth noticing, with the top of the arm left bare and a novel arrangement of two bands of embroidery, an example of the delightful invention of our dressmakers.

SOME INTERESTING MEMBERS OF THE VERY YOUNGEST SET AND THEIR MOTHERS

THESE SMALL PEOPLE ARE AMONG THE VERY LATEST ADDITIONS TO SOCIETY

The very young man who is showing such an early interest in feminine adornment is the son of Captain and Mrs. Joseph Warren Burden, junior, and is photographed with his mother, who was Miss Margery Maude, the daughter of Cyril Maude, the actor. Captain Burden is in the Remount Department at Camp Dix

Marcia Silcox

Walter Scott Shinn

The irresistible person who has captured Mrs. Angier B. Duke's whole attention is her second son, Anthony. Mrs. Duke was, before her marriage, Miss Cordelia Biddle of Philadelphia, the sister of Lieutenant Anthony Drexel Biddle who married Mr. Duke's sister, Miss Mary Duke. Last summer Mr. and Mrs. Duke deserted Newport, where they usually spend their summer, for Long Beach

Lieutenant - Colonel and Mrs. A. Perry Osborn are the cheerful background for this photograph of their two small sons. Mrs. Osborn was Miss Ann Steele, of Baltimore, and is a cousin of Mrs. Devereux Milburn, Mrs. Skiddy von Stade, and the Comtesse Jean de la Gieze. Lieutenant-Colonel Osborn, the son of Professor Henry Fairfield Osborn and a nephew of William Church Osborn, is in France with the American Expeditionary Force

Bachrach

Miss Sheila Devereux Emmet, the attractive young lady at the right of the photograph, is shown with her mother, Mrs. Richard Smith Emmet, who was, before her marriage, Miss Katherine Drexel Dahlgren, the daughter of Mrs. Drexel Dahlgren of New York, Philadelphia, and Lenox. Mrs. Emmet was educated in Europe and made her debut in Rome. Mr. and Mrs. Emmet are now at St. James, Long Island

(Below) A tailleur in navy blue serge has no trimming except two rows of black buttons down the back of the coat. The blouse is of white Georgette crêpe with a wide ruffle collar and cuffs. The small cloth hat, in a mustard shade, is trimmed with an ornament embroidered with dull gold threads and an alert brown feather

Baron de Meyer

Some people write poems, and some paint pictures,—and occasionally some clever person designs a dress like this, which is a combination of all the arts. Soft black taffeta is the theme, and the full skirt and tight bodice make that "table-bell" shape so becoming to the wearer and so charming to beholders. Three rows of black velvet ribbon trim the bodice, each fastened with a velvet bow and a cut steel buckle

COATS FROM REVILLON FRÈRES

Worth has gathered all the wonderful cool blues in the world and put them into this luxurious evening wrap. The lower part is in sapphire blue velvet, imitatively draped; the upper part is in a lighter shade of blue trimmed with beads in embroidered bands—blue beads of every melting shade with just a touch of steel. From each wide sleeve at the cuff hangs a long tassel of fringe in a blue darker than the coat, and the high collar and the cuffs are finished with kolinsky

In these days when one rushes madly from war work to the theatre, coats that will accompany one suitably in both directions are greatly in demand. Callot proposes a solution in caracul, so soft that it drapes like velvet. The cut is simplicity itself with its cape-like line and its kimono sleeve—that artful simplicity that surpasses any amount of elaboration. One concession alone is made to trimming—there are cuffs of sable and a high stole collar thrown over one shoulder

Beaver is the very newest thing in furs—not the smooth decorous beaver that our grandmothers wore, but unclipped beaver that looks like glorified muskrat, very thick and soft and lovely. Callot uses it with slim straight lengths of dull black satin to make a sumptuous evening coat with a collar so high that it looks like a hood. There is beaver on the bottom of the coat, too, and on the slits which are all the sleeves there are, and narrow bands of beaver run down the edges of the opening in front

What though madame has insufficient coal for her furnace, she will have velvet and fur for her home dinner gowns, and all will be better than ever—fur trimming, fur collars, fur sleeves, fur trains, and fur scarfs—the Middle Ages come again in opulence of material handled with a truly “fin de siècle” subtlety of line. The tea-cup lady on the left favours Batik velvet in copper and orange shades with a short train of pure lemon coloured velvet hung from her shoulders and bands of kolinsky around her neck and arms. The clinging oyster white velvet gown in the middle outlines neck, hips, and rumpled cuffs with narrow bands of soft brown sable. But the weary war worker with the cigarette can be content with nothing less than gold brocade lined with purple satin veiled in matching chiffon. The collar, sleeves, and slipper bindings are of skunk, and the long heavy tassels on the points of the unusual side draperies are in gold.

Warmth and Comfort to Those Informal Hours When One May Yet Wish to Be Dressed to Receive the Casual Visitor*

The subtle creature at the left with eyes à la Chinoise dares emerald green and violet brocaded velvet with kimono sleeves very much draped but brought to snug wrists for the sake of warmth. Equally for warmth and effectiveness she has added a collar of kolinsky that winds about her slim neck and hangs to the floor in two slinky trains. Her friend with the knitting and the daguerreotype coiffure prefers a much more occidental gown with a blouse of black velvet embroidered in silver and a straight narrow skirt of light grey duvetyn. The bottom of the skirt has a facing of black velvet, embroidered in silver, that turns up in the front and forms an abbreviated train at the back. When one disentangles the curves of the gown on the right, it becomes beige velvet, wonderfully draped, with a surplice collar and train and sleeve lining of brilliant and supple leopard skin. Each of these gowns offers warmth and comfort and a restful informality

MODELS FROM REDFERN

This afternoon gown forgot all about the mode of severity and expressed itself in wonderful black Chantilly lace embroidered in jet. The bodice has a foundation of pale flesh chiffon veiled in the lace and is cut in a deep V with a decided blouse at the waist. This long baggy effect is one of the strong fashion tendencies. The skirt is of black satin with an overskirt of the lace, and there is a belt of black satin that loops over at one side. The whole costume reaches the height of its loveliness in the sprays of clipped ostrich that trim the large black satin hat

(Left) There are many novel things that a chemise dress may do, but none more charming than this young girl's gown in a deft combination of rose and grey basket weave homespun. The upper part is in the rose, while the skirt and collar are in pale grey. Rose braid and grey thread embroider the bodice and the two long pockets that make decided points of being new. A grey hat and a rose feather give the last touch of jauntiness and youth

(Right) Since this one-piece dress was in a tailored mood, it took a fancy to chocolate brown duvetyn—that material with a genius for street frocks. The result was a rather tight bodice relieved by a quaint section that resembles an Eton jacket with a collar embroidered in beige and brown wool and silk. The skirt is shirred at the back and the fulness is held at the bottom by cord ornaments. With this gown is worn a mushroom turban of dark brown velvet trimmed with soft wide puffs of grosgrain ribbon

Baron de Meyer

One need no longer envy the Navy its capes if one has seen this coat with a cape from Thurn. Its three charms are jauntiness, warmth, and novelty, for the cape is cut on straight narrow lines, with one point slipping through a slit at the other side and pulling around the neck. Naturally, when a cape is of wool, its most becoming companion is a navy blue felt turban with pheasant feathers at one side

(Left) The designer cleverly put the fashionable long lines into this simple one-piece dress of beige crêpe de Chine and navy blue tricolette. A panel of the crêpe de Chine is used back and front, and the sides are entirely of the tricolette. Sufficient unto the gown are the lines thereof,—hence no trimming is used other than a most unusual collar that softly drapes across the front, ties itself in a knot at the back, and hangs in long loose ends; gown from Boyd

(Right) This one-piece dress chooses white pepper duvetyn for its material. In style it is a very wearable and distinctive frock, without trimming and with a severe round neck slit at the front and held together by two brown wool buttons. Tight sleeves, a long waist-line fitted with a crushed girdle, and an underskirt boasting a tunic that begins at either side of the front, all achieve the trim slender silhouette. An untrimmed hat in black satin antique completes the effect by turning up abruptly at the face; gown from Boyd

AGAIN MAKES MANIFEST ITS GENIUS

We always expect this dancer to have unusual gowns, and so we are not surprised at this dress in taupe chiffon, trimmed with narrow bands of wool embroidery in the same shade. Bands of white satin are used at the neck and to finish the sleeves, while a wide band of the satin is veiled with chiffon across the front. As for the over-tunic, thereby hangs many a fascinating little tail, for it is finished with a solid deep band made of wool tassels that at a distance resemble fur. The delightful fabric thus evolved from a plain material is shown below

Note: Florence Walton's personal wardrobe comes from Premet this year and was especially designed for her, in the most unusual materials, by Mme. Renee. Fabrics this season, including even the wool materials and gauze, are trimmed and decorated in distinctive ways, in some instances. Lovely patterns are worked on the flat material by hand, so that the effect is of brocade or spangled cloth. Beads, silks, wools, and braid are used to achieve this desirable result. The making of these elaborate all-over embroidered materials has a double purpose: to produce variety in the midst of a monotony of plain materials (all that the looms have been able to turn out this season), and to give work to hundreds of otherwise idle little sewing girls

An afternoon frock was never more of a success than is this unusual costume in black silk jersey, trimmed with embroidery done in rain-drop streaks in red, white, and tan crystal beads. The medium low square neck is left severely plain and unfinished, while the waist-line is marked by a narrow belt in solid bead work. The two tiers of the underskirt and the bottom of the sleeves are of the plain black silk jersey

This dancer's evening gown is as lovely as ripples of deep sea green net run with tiny tassels in crystal beads over a foundation of white silk could possibly make it. The skirt is slightly draped, and the draperies are finished with bead fringe. Neck-line, sleeve bands, and girdle are in silver gauze, picot edged. All in all, the gown is one shimmering tissue of green and silver, filmy and graceful as an evening gown ought to be

From five in the morning till nine at night these French girls make the shells which help the poilus halt the Hun

THESE ALSO FIGHT FOR FRANCE

LUCIENNE also died for France. She was just nineteen—so young to die. But when one is a refugee from the invaded country, one doesn't care much about death. A shell slips from one's fingers—one's dress catches fire—pouf! It is all over but the hospital for an hour or so, and then the priest in his black robes, chanting. One is lucky to have a funeral.

One hears much about life in the trenches, if one is an American, and very little of life in the towns, those black towns behind the lines where the ouvrières live to make and fill shells. Life is strange and terrible and very dreary in the black towns. Old women, young women, mothers, and wives, and pale orphans like Lucienne—they work all day and never see the sun, or else they work all night. Why not? The poilus never rest till there is no fight left in them. And how can the poilus fight if that long stream of shells is stayed for even an instant?

THE GRIM WORLD OF THE "POUDERIE"

As for the ouvrières, they look so old, so old. Many of them are nineteen, like Lucienne, or even younger. But the war itself ages one, and the hours—up at five and home at nine. And the lack of food, or time in which to cook it. The subtle poison atmosphere of the munition factory does the rest. Girls who work on powder rarely last more than a year.

In this grim unimaginable world that has taken the place of the France they loved, there is just one spot where the ouvrières, numb with weariness, can go and find peace, and comfort, and cleanliness, and hot coffee, and a real smile. That is the Foyer des Alliées, the canteen for Frenchwomen managed by the American Young Women's Christian Association.

At Lyon in the Pouderie there is a mixed babel of tongues. Frenchwomen of all degrees of patois work side by side with Cingalese and Annamites. Aside from superintendents and overseers, the only Frenchmen in the vast black buildings are convicts. Is it any wonder that when the Foyer des Alliées opened its cheerful doors one drizzly night, two thousand curious and tired and skeptical women poured in? They couldn't believe it at first, that any one from that peace that dwells beyond the sea should come willingly to the black towns. Imagine courage that is so fine that it has lost all realization of itself—that is the courage of the ouvrière. She doesn't seem to see what she has done for us—holding the Hun back with frail hands all these four years. She only sees what we do,—the coffee, the warm room, the smile.

"Will you not bring the picture of your mother to the Foyer?" one of the women said wistfully to a young secretary. "I would like to see her.

The Y. W. C. A. Comes into the Grim World

Behind the Lines Where French Girls and Women Put Their Lives Into Munitions

"To have been so gracious as to send you to us!"

"A place to write a letter in a spare hour, a cup of chocolate or coffee when you are hoarse with the cold," so runs a vignette of a typical Foyer sent home by one who used her eyes and her heart in describing what she saw. "A cosy chair and a magazine in front of the fire when you've burned your foot with the powder and are not working that day, a book to read in the dortoir before going to sleep, a bit of music after a long day's work—all these are to be found at the Foyer des Alliées. A woman going back to her home in the south of France with the money so hardly earned last winter said to me, 'At first I didn't care how soon I went. Now, with this (the Foyer) I shall be sorry; one can laugh here.' She was one of those who found an easy chair in front of the fire a pleasant place to knit the blue socks for 'him'—wool for which she had obtained at the lowest possible price through us."

A PLACE WHERE ONE MAY LAUGH

"The women who come are strangely courteous and responsive," another secretary says. "They have philosophic, if not cheerful faces. After their meal, they work with their yellow hardened hands on the most beautiful and delicate embroideries or laces, or on homely stocking darning which they do exquisitely, all the time listening to an English class or to singing."

It seems so pathetically little when one thinks of what France has done for us, and yet the poilus write home that they feel much happier now that they know there are fires and cheerful corners and cushioned chairs for their wives and their sisters—and not just the cold that bites to the soul and the long dark streets.

The poilus aren't the only appreciators. Monsieur Clemenceau himself it was who suggested the opening of a similar Foyer des Alliées for the seventeen thousand women workers in the War Office at Paris. On the Rue Solferino just where it is crossed by the Rue de Lille, in one of the most aristocratic parts of Paris, the American Y. W. C. A. has been given charming quarters for their club rooms—white painted rooms with bands of gold. The white is the loveliest of old ivory done by Time himself, and the gold is a colour of indescribable shadowings. With this dignity and delicacy of an older day as their keynote, the secretaries have made a War Office Foyer that means much to the beauty-loving Frenchwomen, so many of whom had never known the hard lines and the pitiless lights and the vast disillusion of business until the war came.

But long before the American "Y. W." moved into the Rue Solferino it was in Paris doing things for Frenchwomen. The first club was formed—as always—among the neediest class of working girls. It opened with a membership of seventy-two, and offered classes in dressmaking, stenography, gymnastics, English, bookkeeping, and choral singing, the dues for everything to be fifty centimes a month. The Committee had decided not to begin any class without a registration of fifteen.

The first dressmaking class met—or rather it entered, and stood, and kept entering, and standing until the rooms and the halls were jammed with three hundred eager little students. Half of them had to be sent home to come again next week, but the American teachers set bravely out with the remainder, in nowise daunted by the fact that they were instructing under the very shadow of la haute couture.

THE "Y. W." IN PARIS

Wherever the "Y. W." hangs out its sign, English is the preferred course. In Tours, the secretary assures us, almost the whole feminine population wants to sing "Over There" just as Georgie Cohan wrote it, and not in the spirited translation. In three weeks' time five hundred women—workers all—signed up to study English, and forty-two classes were in session in August with more to follow. The same eager curiosity extends to all things American. What does the American girl look like at home, in her clubs and classes, in her sports, and in her every-day life? What does she wear when she drops that most becoming Y. W. C. A. uniform and pours tea? This demand for accurate copyable information is so keen and so universal that the secretaries over there appeal constantly to the Y. W. C. A. headquarters at 600 Lexington Avenue, New York City, for pictures—snapshots, posters, any thing at all that will visualize American girls to French girls. The small collections of pictures now in the various club rooms and Foyers are being worn out by passing from hand to hand.

But all the "Y. W." work in France isn't done for Frenchwomen. Three great classes of American women are now working in France—nurses, telephone girls and stenographers, and canteen workers attached to the various war organizations. As the "Y. W." itself says: "Red Cross nurses marching down Fifth Avenue arouse the greatest enthusiasm in the crowds that watch

MISS ELSIE DE WOLFE

This photograph of Miss Elsie De Wolfe, in her garden at Versailles, was taken during one of her brief holidays from her hospital known as the Mission de l'Ambrine, now established at Aumont, Oise. The former home of this Mission, at Compiègne, has been destroyed by German bombardments. Miss De Wolfe expects to return to America soon for her first holiday in eighteen months. She writes, "I wonder what Hindenburg thinks now of the army that couldn't swim and couldn't fly, but which has gotten here just the same, and in time, too!"

DECORATIONS BY MURIEL DRAPER

The very office of the Whitney Studio Club shows that it was made by and for artists. Its walls are turquoise blue, its carpet striped in sapphire and red violet. The curtains are of sapphire sateen lined with pale green yellow silk and bound with scarlet cord from which the eye passes to a scarlet table with a gay border of fruits and flowers. The benches are scarlet, orange, and pale green yellow with sateen cushions of red violet and sapphire bound with scarlet and turquoise tape. The ceiling is the colour of a pale yellow sunset

The walls of the library are grey with a border of scarlet and blue and yellow. The tables, too, are grey, outlined with a scarlet design that hails from Greenwich House, and they stand on a carpet of rope along with the grey chairs with their seats of blue and scarlet webbing. One might not know it from this little vista, but the library is very well stocked, indeed, with everything that the art student needs

MRS. HARRY PAYNE WHITNEY, well-known as a patron of art, is that rare and wonderful person—an artist with money. She doesn't have to dream on paper. She says, "Let there be a Studio Club," and there is a Studio Club that is just what a Greenwich Village Studio Club ought to be, from office to exhibition room. This last is always full of ambitious canvasses, for the Village is ambitious to a degree undreamed of by uptown New Yorkers who, if they wanted to exhibit and had anything worth showing, would never hesitate for lack of the wherewithal to hire a room. A room, however, is all that the Village ever lacked, and now it has one that costs nothing but club membership dues which are very moderate indeed, but which support its needs. There is a library, too—the only one downtown, and a great time-saver to those who live far from Forty-second Street. Here the current magazines may be seen and the illustrations duly criticized. And, in the writing-room, great and glorious ideas may be put into permanent form between orange walls on a sapphire blue carpet.

The primary colours unite in a writing-room where the walls are orange with a small design in blue and scarlet as a border. The carpet is sapphire, the benches are orange with cushions of scarlet sateen, the desk fittings are scarlet and blue. The chairs with their interesting blue webbing seats and sturdy orange lines were made from designs by M. de Faulla of Greenwich House by boys of that settlement

Bertha Kalich returns from motion pictures in a play called "The Riddle: Woman," which is a drama that manages to be laid in Copenhagen and still escape any such local colouring as nervous breakdowns or the usual psychological ghost. Two Plays and Golden Promises of the Théâtre du Vieux Colombier, and Some Less Important Productions in English

By CLAYTON HAMILTON

THE second season in New York of the Théâtre du Vieux Colombier was initiated on the night of October fourteenth with a production of "Le Secret" by Henry Bernstein, and this offering was followed one week later by a presentation of "Le Mariage de Figaro." No two plays could be more different than these in subject or in method or in atmosphere; yet both pieces were adequately acted and effectively produced. By this double exhibition of efficiency, a reassurance and a promise were immediately registered.

A year ago, when this theatre was imported overseas from the Alley of the Ancient Dovecot, in the Latin Quarter, where its promising development had been rudely interrupted in the autumn of 1914, Jacques Copeau and the members of his reassembled company were required to contend against many obstacles; but most of these obstacles were successfully surmounted, and the first American season of the Vieux Colombier was emphatically interesting. Now, after a long summer of leisurely preparation, this French company has embarked upon a second season in New York which affords every promise of a very fine fruition.

The repertory system, with its bewildering change of bill from night to night, has been discarded in favour of the simpler system of a weekly change of bill. A new production will be offered every Monday night and will be continued for eight successive performances. By this means, the public of New York, which is habituated to the system of continuous runs, will be better enabled to keep track of the successive offerings of this multifarious institution.

No less than thirty-two plays, long and short, have already been announced for production during the course of the current season of twenty-five weeks. The only foreign, or non-French, plays that are included in the programme are Shakspeare's "Twelfth Night," Ibsen's "Rosmersholm," and Maeterlinck's "Peléas et Mélisande"; but among the French authors on the list are Molière, (Continued on page 90)

BORIS ANISFELD BRINGS HIS ART TO AMERICA

Some Facts About the Artist, His Work, And the Influences That Molded Them

By WILLIAM B. MURRAY

THE whole world knows how of recent years everything Russian has become a fad in the European capitals and in New York. Since the winter of 1909,—the date of the first appearance of the Ballet Russe in Paris, there has been a succession of Russian artists passing to our shores and carrying with them the art of their native land for our inspection and our financial and artistic appreciation. But unfortunately, so far as America is concerned, Russian art has in few instances been represented at its best. We have been much imposed upon by charlatans and have lent a hungry ear to many an artist of second or third rank.

Memory does not have to hark back far to realize the truth of these remarks. The Ballet came to New York with all the external trappings, it is true, but with its personnel so depleted by the war that its performances bore little resemblance to the well-nigh perfect ensemble of those shown in Paris and in London. Russian operas in other than the Russian tongue are but enfeebled manifestations of the art value of Moussorgsky and of Borodin. Only through Russian instrumental music—that product of absolute abstraction—have we viewed the Russian soul and Russian art in its purity.

THE FLOWER OF RUSSIAN ART COMES TO AMERICA

Now, however, it would seem that we are to see and hear the genuine article. The Russian revolution, in its destruction of the home market, is driving to this country the finest flower of Russian art. As we write, the report is current that Fokine is here—Fokine, the master "par excellence" of Russian choreographic art. Already on our shores and with two concerts behind him is Prokovieff, the "enfant terrible" of the young school of composers. But the most interesting fact of all is that Boris Anisfeld, Russian painter, is showing over one hundred examples of his art in exhibition in November at the Brooklyn Institute, and that, beginning in December and continuing throughout the winter, the exhibition is to have a grand tour as extensive as that of the Zuloaga show two years ago.

The Anisfeld exhibition possesses particular significance, for Russian pictorial art, except for a few scattering examples of little importance, has received no representation here. Naturally much of Russian painting has been of ecclesiastic subjects and has never departed from its rightful home, the Russian orthodox church, while Russian art-collectors have ever been jealous of the secular paintings of their artists and accordingly have never suffered them to leave the country, as have the rich men of other European nations. Thus unfamiliarity with the subject naturally places the connoisseur who would view the paintings of Anisfeld at a disadvantage, for he must do so without the basis of comparison offered by a familiarity with both previous and contemporary phases of Russian art. He must view it, therefore, and estimate it in and of itself or in the light of the art of other peoples and other times.

The writer's first meeting with Boris Anisfeld was appropriately in a little Russian tea room that nestles in the shade of tall buildings just east of Sixth Avenue, on one of the thirtieths. Within its dimness we sat and talked. Though Anisfeld is familiar with German and French, the conversation was limited to his native language, for through it he could best express his ideas of life and his art.

The experience was rare. Save for the much-mouthed Russian of a few drinkers of tea at neighboring tables and the occasional shuffling of feet and dishes by the Russian peasant girls who served the customers, there was no interruption. From the outside the roaring of the elevated trains, the voices of teamsters, and the occasional purr of an automobile engine carried the bustling voice of New York to our ears. Apart therefrom, however, the scene might have been thousands of miles to the east in that land of strangely mingled cold and warmth, Russia.

From him that first day I learned—labouriously, it is true, because of the means of communication—much of his life, and something of his views on art, and particularly his attitude towards his own work. Out of all the twists of conversation and the jumble of subjects came, as a ray of pure light in the darkness, his saying, "I paint what I feel, not what I see," and again in speaking of work for the stage, "My scenery comes from the feelings aroused in me by both drama and music."

ANISFELD, THE MAN AND HIS WORK

Then I saw him later in the Metropolitan Opera House painting his scenery for Leroux's, "La Reine Fiammette," to be produced in January. Slowly and deliberately the stocky figure moved over the great stretches of canvas spread wide on planks above the seats of the orchestra, his hand wielding—almost carelessly, it seemed—the long-handled scenic brush; for Anisfeld insists upon executing himself every stage design. He never leaves this part of the work to a subordinate, as many another, including even Bakst, has done.

Then came chats over tea in his studio, chats in a polyglot of French and English, as the knowledge of our language grew, and in these came the fuller acquaintance with the man whose resemblance in feature to the conventional pictures of the Savior has earned for him the sobriquet "the Bessarabian Christ." There is a great simplicity in the character of Boris Anisfeld, the man, a simplicity that speaks both in external appearance and in the directness of his thought and speech. There is no subtlety unless it be that subtlety of subtleties that speaks in terms of simplicity. He goes at every subject simply and directly, finding immediately the heart of the matter. As his work in its every manifestation indicates, he is ever sure of his ideas before expressing them, whether that expression take the form of speech or of pigment.

Before entering upon any discussion of Anisfeld's work, some understanding is necessary of his life and the trend of art movements in Russia during the first two decades of the twentieth century. Boris Anisfeld was born in 1879, in Bieltsy, a little town in the heart of Bessarabia, of a Russian father

This delightful "sur tout," or table decoration, by Cecil Howard, of Paris, is executed in black bronze, beaten brass, and alabaster and is shown on a cloth of unbleached linen with lines of openwork converging in the centre. Howard has made many "sur touts" of this character for prominent Parisiennes, including one for Mlle. Monna Delza, the actress. He is an associate of the Société Nationale des Beaux Arts and has been decorated by the Serbian Government for work in Serbia with the British Red Cross. FOR THE HOSTESSES

Some Facts About the Food Value of That Delectable Sweet, Honey, and a Few of Its Many Uses as a Sugar Substitute

IN the old pioneer days the man who found a "bee tree" knew that he had found a valuable prize, for until trade with the tropics introduced cane sugar into temperate regions, honey was by far the most common sweet used for human food. Of late years we have begun to look upon it as a delicacy or luxury, forgetting that honey has a high food value apart from its palatable qualities. From earliest times people have schemed to get the bees to build their combs in accessible spots, building their hives to attract them, and through this custom of "keeping" bees, we have come to have a better and more economical supply of honey than we would otherwise have had.

JUST WHAT AND WHY IS HONEY?

Honey may be roughly described as a syrup with a distinctive flavour and aroma and made up of four parts of sugar to one part of water. But this scientific description can in no way reveal its charm. The "flavour and aroma" are really the distinguishing characteristics which make the use of honey a delight; because of this pleasure, honey has come to be looked upon as something to be eaten merely for pleasure's sake. That this pleasure is merely an "added attraction," however, becomes apparent when one studies the food value of honey and its many uses. The simplest way of using honey is to serve it with bread, breakfast cereals, boiled rice, pancakes, and other mild-flavoured foods. An ounce of honey will spread as many slices as an ounce of jam; it makes a good substitute for butter when used on bread, and is very generally relished by children. If it is combined in this use with cream cheese, it forms a well-balanced ration and is very pleasing to the taste.

Of the two varieties of honey on the market, comb-honey and strained honey, there is very little to be said in point of choice. Many people think that strained honey is liable to be impure, but this is not the case. There is but little adulterated honey to be had, because the practice of adulterating honey has become both dangerous and unprofitable since the pure food legislation. As for comb-honey, it can not be adulterated except by processes which cost more than the retail price, and therefore one may be sure that it is the product of the hive. Many persons think that crystallized honey is impure, whereas the purer the honey the more liable it is to crystallization, and alfalfa honey is often sold in cakes. Honey varies much according to the kind of "nectar," the sweet substance drawn from the flowers by the bees, from which it is made. Honey made in a buckwheat country is dark, full-bodied, and rather acid in flavour. A person who has become accustomed to this variety would think that the mild light-coloured honey made in clover districts was some kind of artificial honey, while the one who had always eaten the latter would be as certain that the buckwheat product was not genuine. Because of this, some honey dealers blend several kinds to produce a mixture which does not vary at different seasons, and this is often done with a great deal of skill.

Some form of sweet is included in almost all army rations, and, because of its popularity, honey is very acceptable in this connection. It has a beneficial mildly laxative effect, and introduces a pleasing variety in the diet which makes it particularly wholesome.

THE BUYING AND USING OF HONEY

If honey is to be substituted in the diet as a matter of economy, it must be procured at the producers. By using the parcel post as a means of transportation, the cost will be materially lessened. The extracted honey is shipped in five-gallon cans by some producers, just as it comes from the extracting machines, and must be strained, liquefied (in some cases), and bottled by the consumer. This saves the cost of all these operations and will make the honey very economical if bought in large quantities. Honey should be kept in a dry place as it absorbs moisture and is likely to sour and spoil. A dry warm place is better for it than a cool damp one; the least desirable place is the refrigerator.

In cooking with honey there are two points to be remembered. If it is used in place of molasses, care should be taken to reduce the amount of soda used, as molasses is more acid than honey. A cupful of honey needs only one-fourth to one-half a level teaspoonful of soda. If it is used in place of sugar, the fact that each cupful of honey contains about one-fourth cupful of water should be remembered when measuring the liquid for the recipe. By using less liquid in that proportion than the recipe calls for, good results will be obtained.

Honey may be used in place of sugar in cake-making, with excellent results. It adds a pleasant flavour and keeps the cake moist longer. A honey cake made without butter will keep fresh for months and will improve with age in flavour, while one made with butter will keep its flavour until the butter grows rancid. The dough itself can be kept almost indefinitely and can be kneaded more easily if allowed to stand several days. Icing made with honey has the same advantage that honey cakes have, as it will keep soft for months.

By far the most general use of honey in cookery is for cakes of various kinds, and almost every kind is represented, from elaborate fruit cakes to simple cookies. As the honey flavour combines well with spices, many of these cakes are on the gingerbread order, and, because honey keeps the cakes fresh, it is used extensively by commercial bakers. The simpler forms will be preferred by busy housewives.

HONEY CAKES AND FILLINGS

Rub one-half cup of butter and one cup of honey together; add a well-beaten egg and one-half cup of sour milk. Sift in four cups of flour, into which has been sifted one teaspoonful of soda, one-half teaspoonful of cinnamon, and one-half teaspoonful of ginger. Bake in a shallow pan and cut in squares.

Mix one-half cup of sugar and one-half cup of honey and boil until the syrup will spin a thread when dropped from a spoon. Beat the yolks of four eggs until light; pour over them the syrup and beat until cold; then add one cup of sifted flour and cut and fold the beaten whites of the eggs into the mixture. Bake for forty or fifty minutes in a pan lined with buttered paper, in a slow oven.

A very delicious filling for a plain or spice layer cake is crystallized honey spread between the layers, varying the amount according to the taste.

The following recipe makes a cake which will appeal to children because of its flavour and shape. Heat three-fourths of a cup of honey and one-fourth of a cup of butter until the butter melts. While warm add one-half teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-eighth teaspoonful of cloves and let stand till cold. Dissolve one-half teaspoonful of soda in two tablespoonfuls of water; beat one egg well and add to the honey. Sift one and one-half or two cups of flour and add to the mixture a little at a time, stirring in a cup of raisins cut into small pieces. All the flour may not be necessary, but enough should be added to make a dough that will hold its shape. Drop by spoonfuls on a buttered tin and bake in a moderate oven. The cakes, which are delicious and wholesome, are appreciated alike by children and grownups.

It's a wise woman that chooses black velvet for her evening gown, for no material is lovelier, more becoming, suitable for more occasions, or more certain of retaining its prestige through several winter seasons

An evening gown of soft lustrous satin, in a dark shade, has a distinct advantage over its lighter filmier sisters—its life is so much longer. Its charm is just as great, however, as this model proves

DRESSING ON A WAR INCOME

THIS season there has been an unexpected demand for evening gowns. Shop after shop has remarked on this rather surprising state of affairs. It would seem, with posters and flags reminding us constantly of war-time economies and with most of our "young America" fighting in foreign countries, that first of all the gowns to be discarded would be the evening gown. Never before in history have there been so many difficult positions to be filled by women—positions that demand hard strenuous work and call for the most practical type of clothes. For day-times, stiff, almost mannish, tailor-mades have been necessarily most in demand.

A reaction is the natural result. In the evening the hours of relaxation mean more than they ever did before, and quite naturally woman turns her attention to the most feminine of all clothes, the evening gown.

The majority of these are very simple in line and quite simply trimmed, and the result is charming. Some of the materials are run with handwork, such as embroidery in beads, tinsel, silk, braid, appliqué flowers, and fur, giving a most elaborate effect. However, the simpler effects in velvet, satin, silk chiffon, and net are preferable. These are durable, and if chosen in a quiet colour will retain their charms through several seasons.

There is no material quite so lovely for an evening gown as black velvet. A gown of this soft wonderful material is the saving grace of more than one woman, especially when her wardrobe is limited and her income reduced by the war. The sketch at the upper left on this page illustrates how charming a gown may be when black velvet is used. The very new and smart bodice has the low square neck-line in front and a certain degree of snugness at the waist. The skirt is made in two parts, with a tight underskirt and an overskirt of the velvet that runs to a long square train at one side. Skunk fur finishes the bottom of the skirt and the long silk voile sleeves. The voile, over flesh coloured tulle, fills in the bodice at the front, and there is a narrow belt of velvet ending in clipped velvet fringe which marks the long waist. This gown was designed especially for the mature woman. It will be copied to order in black velvet for $125.

Simple, Practical, and Charming Designs
For the Evening Gown Which Is So Pleasant a Contrast to the Clothes of War Work

Satin in soft lustrous quality is also used for evening gowns, and in the darker shades, brown, black, taupe, navy blue, and plum colour, it has none of the harshness of the lighter shades. This material is wonderfully pliable and has unusual draping qualities. A charming gown developed in satin is shown in the sketch at the upper right on this page. The long-waisted effect is outlined by a stiff band of satin which lies in folds across the hips. A panel that hangs from either shoulder tucks in under this band, and the lower part of the dress drapes up to one side. A deep "V" at the front of the gown has a tendency to lengthen the lines. This design is suggested in taupe satin with the panel and train lined with gold tissue, and the long tight sleeves finished with the faintest piping of gold. The bottom of the skirt also has a narrow piping of gold. This design will be copied for $115.

soft pliable velours in a peculiar shade of yellow—a shimmering green gold—has been chosen, and the classic ornament at the front is in silver tissue. A narrow girdle of folds of silver and apple green tissue marks a slightly Empire waist-line. The skirt is draped to give the effect of being quite narrow. This is a design in which almost any shade of velours might be used. The effect is quiet and dignified, and the style will remain in fashion through several seasons. Another advantage is the fact that this gown is equally smart for almost any age. A little French dressmaker who gives unusual chic and value will copy this model for $125.

Silk net in a deep ivory colour over ivory silk is used in the charming design at the upper right on page 59. This frock is quaint in style, with its deep collar of net, its fluted ruffle at the bottom of the over-tunic, and sleeve ruffles finished with narrow bands of apricot silk. The tight underskirt is also finished with a band of the silk, and the bodice is fitted into a wide crush girdle of the net outlined with ribbon bands. The long sleeves are transparent, and a full over-tunic gives a last touch on this lovely gown. The freshness, the crispness, the discreet use of colour, and the quaint trimming go far to

Velours for evening wear is having a well-earned war-time popularity—it is so quiet, so dignified, so durable, and so becoming make this one of the most desirable gowns of the season. It will be copied to order in net of any colour for $105.

For the past season, chiffon has been very popular with old and young alike. Some of the colours are very lovely, whether vivid, such as geranium red, or soft and dull, such as fog blue. Gowns of this graceful fabric were worn for dinner and dancing; they were untrimmed, with the exception of a narrow ribbon girdle in a harmonious colour or in silver or gold, and possibly a small corsage of hand-made flowers in colours used as a finish to the girdle. The chiffon was usually draped over a soft satin. So successful was this type of dress, that it is again making its appearance, especially in frocks for young girls.

In the sketch at the lower left on this page, that mysterious shade of blue violet chiffon, the exact shade of violets, is used over charmeuse in the same colour. The simplicity of the bodice is typical of these gowns; it is made with two soft layers of chiffon draped over the arms. The skirt is undraped, and at the waist a soft puffing of the chiffon is used, giving the thick effect sometimes obtained in a blousing bodice. This effect is very new. The puffing of chiffon is run with violet ribbon faced with silver grey, and at the front, double bands of the ribbon are knotted and allowed to fall in long ends. It is difficult to find a more practical dress, and one that is so lovely, as well. A French dressmaker in New York will make this gown in any colour combination for $125.

Very much after the lines most favoured by Lucile is the gown shown in the sketch at the lower right on this page. This model combines lines that are quaintly reminiscent of the Directoire period with lines that are delightfully modern. It is in pale peach faille with silver fringe and narrow silver braid as trimming. The bodice is partly fitted and has sleeves that puff at either shoulder. The faille hangs in long panel trains at either side of the skirt over a tight underskirt of silver tissue, finished with a border of tucks at the bottom. This dress could be carried out with equal charm in panne velvet. Made to order, it will cost $110.

A delightful contrast to the tailored day-time clothes of the war worker is this quaint frilly frock of silk and shimmering net

Note—For the duration of the War Vogue will conduct this department to meet the needs of the woman with a war-reduced income. If any special problem confronts you, write to Vogue, 19 West 44th Street, enclose a three-cent stamp, and it will answer without charge any individual question on dress, will suggest ways of altering frocks, assist in planning a wardrobe, and suggest patterns. VOGUE'S CHRISTMAS SUGGESTIONS

VOGUE, as you will see in the following pages, has taken the one sure way of arranging that you do your Christmas shopping early—it has done it for you. That is, it has done all the difficult part, which means going about in shops and making selections; the only thing that you need to do is to decide what you want and follow the directions below.

When you look at the service flags that hang over the shop doors, and over the post office doors, and in the express offices, you realize that they mean a tremendous shortage of employees. The same thing is true of the railroads, and, in addition to that, the Government wants to keep the railroads as free as possible for the transportation of Army materials—and all these things are reasons for shopping early.

But there is another word beside "early" that the Government asks us to remember in connection with our Christmas shopping, and that word is "useful." If you are going to give any presents, you will want to give useful ones, for patriotic pockets have been almost emptied lately, and "useful" is no longer a term of reproach for a Christmas present. All signs fail, of course, when it comes to the pile of gifts of which the baby's stocking is the nucleus, but for all grown-ups Vogue has shopped with the practical in mind.

All the presents have been selected on the assumption that the receiver, as well as the giver, is living on a war-reduced income, so that the useful present is as blessed to receive as to give, besides being in excellent taste this year when charities are making so many demands on us. There are presents for every age and for every variety of person, from the tired business woman to the men in the camps.

In fact, in these eleven pages of gifts Vogue rather prides itself on having run the gamut—or as much of a gamut as one can run in war times—of gifts for every one. This is a Christmas when every one is busy with war work and too much absorbed in varied activities to give much time or thought to the selection of Christmas gifts. Vogue would be glad to feel that it had been the means of releasing all its subscribers for Red Cross work by making for them that intelligent canvass of the shops which means the spending of so many hours of valuable time.

Do not put off till to-morrow what you can order to-day. The Shopping Service is ready, the shops are ready, and it won't take more than an hour or two, at the most, spent at your desk to set them both to cooperating with you in rounding up all slacker presents that haven't already enlisted in the great Early Christmas Shopping Drive.

Before you order your gifts, please read the directions below.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

THE patriotic gift this year is the useful gift. Futilities have no place in the world to-day. Therefore Vogue, in its Christmas gifts sections, will show only those articles which can stand the tests of value and utility.

Order these gifts by number. Full instructions for ordering are given on this page. Order your gifts at once. The Government wants all Christmas shopping over at the earliest possible date in order to clear the lines of transportation for war-time essentials. By the closest cooperation with the shops we have arranged to have a definite supply held for our readers, but naturally this offer will hold good for only a limited time. Those who order first will be served first. Every order will be numbered and filled in the order of its receipt.

Vogue will buy for you, without charge for its services, any article mentioned in its pages. When ordering anything that has appeared in Vogue, give the date of the issue, the number of the page, and the order number of the article, if it has one.

How to order. Write to the Shopping Service, stating what you want (See Model Letter) and enclose cheque or money order to pay for the desired articles, or postage stamps for articles costing less than $1. There are no charge accounts in the Shopping Service.

Second Choice. Possible disappointment and delay may be avoided if your second choice is stated as indicated in the Model Letter above. The first choice will always be purchased unless the stock is exhausted by previous sales.

Letters of inquiry should enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope for our reply. We will do our utmost, but can not guarantee during the month before Christmas to answer all questions. Please write your letter and signature very distinctly.

THE YOUNGER GENERATION

Every woman wears velvet this winter, even when she's so young that the band of grey angora on the bottom of her skirt comes just to her knees. The velvet is navy blue, in this case, joined to a blouse of French blue crêpe de Chine embroidered in angora and finished with navy blue grosgrain ribbon

Abba

One is never weary of wearing the green if one is youthful and the green is a velvet overblouse with a skirt of black and green plaid. There is black, green, and red embroidery, notably on the batiste underblouse. The mushroom toque is in plaid with a velvet brim and engaging little woolly roses

Lorna Volare's friends will be glad to see that she's still light-hearted enough to carry her doll upside down, even though she's a full-fledged star. But she isn't thinking of "Daddies" now, but of the organdie frock she wears in the play with ruffles edged with Valenciennes lace, and a hat with two lace-edged ruffles; the frock is from Hartman

(Middle, below) A party means a new frock whether one's hair is up or down, and here is a demure suggestion in that cream coloured chalis beloved of our grandmothers. Some of it grows rosebuds in pink and green all over its smooth self and the rest is plain. The corsage of cotton and wool rose buds has nothing to fear from the florist's bouquet

When one is too young to go roller skating unaccompanied, one may wear a smock and wee trousers of dull green gingham with white linen collar and cuffs embroidered in dull green cotton. A wide belt fastening in front under a gingham loop is used on a long waist-line; from Best

The philosophic pirate in the tan linen play suit is not above employing dark brown cotton embroidery on his collar. His blouse slips on over his Dutch hair cut and fastens in front with three most unwar-like pearl buttons which were his mother's idea entirely; from Best

The NESTLÉ Permanent Hair Wave

"After Hubby had left for his office Emily flew to aunty exclaiming: 'Oh, Aunty you are so wonderful and so simple, you good old darling, and I am so, so happy.' You know he instantly noticed the difference and for the first time in many months I seemed to interest him more than the War news. And how curly my hair is, look! Is it not great! Who would have thought of it, ME with naturally curly hair. ME, who passed her life behind curlers and the boudoir cap."

"Yes", said Aunty, "let that be a lesson to you. Men are logical in most matters and don't want to guess or imagine a woman's beauty. They want to see it. Really, dear, we might do worse than giving one or two of these Nestlé machines to some of our friends as Christmas presents, for after all, the thing went splendidly, and we had quite a good time over the curling of our hair yesterday afternoon."

The Nestle Home-Outfit

for permanent waving is truly the most appreciated article ever offered for family use. Look at it in the true light. With an outlay of fifteen dollars you possess one of the greatest inventions ever made. . . . A permanent hair-waver, guaranteed not to injure any hair, guaranteed to wave or curl your hair so that it can be washed, in fact guaranteed to look and act in no way different from real naturally wavy hair. This wave is absolutely permanent and all you do, if you want to rewave it again (as your hair grows from the root) is to get fresh Nestlé tubes (two or three dollars worth for a full head). With this Home Outfit you can wave any number of heads, by just sending hair samples to Nestlé's with the order for tubes. Write for our illustrated booklet, it will explain everything, or if you are in a hurry, send the money with a hair-sample and a letter explaining whether you want to have large or small waves, or hanging curls for a child, etc.

The Nestol Comb

This wonderful article should be in every household because, every second woman or child has hair which waves somewhat naturally, if ever so little. Such hair should never be handled by curlers or hot tongs, while regular water-waving will speedily improve any natural tendency. This is the only water-waving device invented which works effectively in inexperienced hands.

Price $2.00 and $2.50

(Four and five inch sizes)

Foreign Postage Extra

Our illustrated booklet on all waving subjects is sent free and contains a lot of interesting matter.

A letter from Tunbridge Wells

VERY frequently of late I've had such letters as this. Some of them have travelled so far that they have taken months to reach us. But all of them, in one way or another, tell the same story—that CREME ELCAYA is helping lovely women to remain beautiful, revealing undreamed-of charm in some, adding an exquisiteness of person to all.

But here is the letter from England:

"Tunbridge Wells, Kent, England.

Dear Sir:

I am writing to ask if you will give me the address of any of your agents in England where I can obtain Creme Elcaya (non-greasy.)

Until recently I have been able to get it at Boots, Chemists, but they now say that it is unobtainable. I do so want to continue using Creme Elcaya as I like it better than any other cream.

Yours truly,
(Mrs.) F.—Y.—."

P. S.—If you have no other agents in England, could I send direct to you?"

These letters from all sorts of odd places 'round the world have told us more about CREME ELCAYA than we could have told the writers in the beginning. We sought to give women a non-greasy disappearing toilet cream that would protect and beautify the skin under face powder, day or evening. They have found it not only a delightful adjunct of the toilet but a necessity wherever lovely woman would be her loveliest.

As so many have proved that this formula for beauty is unfailing, isn't it time you tried it? There is nothing difficult about it.

always use CREME ELCAYA before putting on your face powder, in this way—

A little CREME ELCAYA rubbed gently into the skin; then if you need color, a very little good Rouge spread carefully over the cheeks before the cream is quite dry; and after that the film of face powder over all.

Right off you'll like the feeling of it—and the looks. And with regular use you will see a refining and freshening of your complexion that you wouldn't have believed possible.

We want you to learn the easy way to have a skin like velvet. Send 10c in a letter marked Department "M" to the address below and obtain a trial package of CREME ELCAYA—the non greasy, skin-refining toilet cream—and a miniature box of ELCAYA COMPLEXION POWDER. If you need color, send an additional 10c for a sample of ELCAYA ROUGE and use it with CREME ELCAYA. There's nothing better.

Your dealer has ELCAYA and has sold it for years. Ask him.

ON HER DRESSING-TABLE

IT is always gratifying to realize that it was a woman, working in collaboration with her husband, who discovered radium,—a mineral which has proved to be of incalculable benefit in the medical world as well as in research laboratories. It is a man, however, who has recently adapted this same mineral to the less serious, but important, needs of the toilet. He argues that if a large quantity proves efficacious when used on a skin afflicted with some terrible disease, beneficial results should be produced by a small quantity upon the complexion.

And so to-day Monsieur and Madame Curie might be amused to learn that a specialist is using this almost priceless mineral in compounding some delightful toilet preparations that have been found successful in England and have now made their appearance here. It is claimed that radium is the sworn foe of sallowness, pimples, roughness, eruptions, wrinkles, sagging, and other blemishes. The value of these preparations lies in the fact that just the right amount of the radium is used, and all the other ingredients are also of the best quality.

The series begins with a delightful soap which produces a rich soothing leather. Its daily use will promote a healthy skin,—the first step on the road to beauty. This soap may be bought for $1 a cake. After a thorough cleansing of the skin, which should take place at night, a night cream should be applied with a gentle massage movement and rubbed well into the skin so that the soothing unguents and tireless radium rays may exert their full power. This cream strengthens the glands, but does not grow hair; it costs $2 a jar.

A GREASELESS VANISHING CREAM

For use in the daytime there is a greaseless vanishing cream that is effective in clearing out the clogged pores, softening the skin, and strengthening the muscles, thus preventing wrinkles and removing blemishes. As the cream disappears at once, it may be applied before going out, but though invisible, the radium continues to do its work. This cream costs $2 a jar.

A face powder containing the same healing properties, serves not only as a protection, but as an active agent to improve the skin. It may be had in five tints,—blanche, naturelle, rachel, flesh, and brunette, at $2 a box. Talcum powder, a compact powder, and a box of rouge, are to be found in the series, each costing $1.

The hair tonic is particularly beneficial, as it soothes, heals, and cleanses the scalp, promoting a natural and abundant growth of hair; it may be bought for $2 a bottle. Shampoo powders to be used in conjunction with the tonic, are put up in air-tight gelatine tubes and sold for 25 cents each. Perhaps the most interesting use to which the radium is put is the chin pad, a dainty silk affair containing this mineral for toning up the facial muscles and preventing the sagging that is so soon responsible for wrinkles and a double chin. This little pad, in light silk, costs $10. Another pad, about one half as large, is made to fit the forehead and eliminates crow's feet and lines. It costs $5. Both of these pads are charged so as to last indefinitely. Although these preparations are all perfumed with a delicious odour, it is of a subtle quality that does not interfere with one's own perfume.

Another delicious fragrance is contained in a preparation from Paris. It is a perfect essence of violet which conservative women will be sure to welcome. It may be bought in an eight-ounce bottle for $9.65. A more pungent perfume has also been imported from France and may be bought for $5.25.

LOCOMOBILE

The production of Locomobile motor cars will be discontinued January first, 1919, until after the war. This is necessary in view of our greatly increased responsibilities in making varied equipment for the Army. Branches will be maintained in order to give Service to Customers of the Company.

Orders for the limited number of cars now available for delivery will be attended to with care; and those who may wish to place with us orders for delivery after the war, are assured that the policy of the Company will in no way change and we will continue to build six cylinder models of the highest possible quality.

MOTOR NOTES

MOST motorists have an instinctive desire to know how fast they are traveling. This is true of the driver of the car who, in nine cases out of ten, keeps a watchful, if subconscious, eye on the speedometer. It is also true, however, of the passengers. Whether they want to ride slowly or to make a speed not always consistent with the speed laws, they like to be informed of the rate at which they are traveling. But it is by no means convenient for the occupants of the tonneau to see the dial of the speedometer, and it therefore becomes necessary to meet their desire by means of special devices. One of these, which is very suitable as a Christmas gift to a friend who happens to be an automobile enthusiast, consists of an eight-day clock and also a speedometer of a standard make. These two instruments are mounted on a mahogany rack and are intended to be installed in the rear compartment of the car. The supplementary speedometer dial is connected with the regular driving speedometer, and in this way the occupants of the rear compartment, even in a limousine type of body, are enabled at all times to know the rate of travel. The price of this equipment, fitted with instruments of excellent quality, is $50.

The owners of closed automobiles which are not equipped by the manufacturers with dictograph sets, can now have sets of this kind installed separately. By reason of its practical worth and convenience, the motor dictograph has entirely superseded the old-fashioned telephone and the still more old-fashioned speaking tube, and by this new means communication between the passengers and the chauffeur is rendered no more difficult than ordinary conversation. It is only necessary to press the button and speak in one's ordinary tone of voice to give the necessary directions. Installation of this kind, representing a real advance in the convenience of the closed car, is made by the General Acoustic Company.

A NEW UPHOLSTERY MATERIAL

Automobile owners can assist the Government in the paramount business of winning the war in more ways than one. It is not merely a question of conserving gasoline, oil, and tires so that there may be an unlimited and unrestricted supply of these vital necessities, but it is also a question of intelligent use of materials for fitting the cars. For example, mohair velvet, which is used by L. C. Chase and Company for automobile upholstery, is not only a very attractive material with which to upholster one's automobile, but it is also more practical for this purpose than wool, as mohair has been proved by test to be much stronger.

Even with the efficient system of traffic regulation which has made New York and other American cities remarkable for their scarcity of accidents in proportion to the number of motor vehicles operated in their streets, occasional collisions are inevitable. The wise motorist, of course, carries collision insurance, both to reimburse himself for damages sustained and to protect himself against legal actions of other persons involved. In addition to this type of insurance, however, it is an excellent plan to equip the car with one of the modern types of bumpers, such as that perfected by Edward V. Hartford, Inc. These bumpers are so designed as to absorb in themselves most of the shocks of ordinary collision and thus to protect the car from the effects of such unfortunate accidents. They may be mounted both at the front and at the rear of the machine. With most types of bodies they add to, rather than detract from, the general appearance, and, for this reason, are doubly desirable.

WHEN BLOWOUTS OCCUR

Nearly every one who rides on rubber tires is familiar with the annoyances of blowouts and punctures, the great banes of motoring. It is more than annoying to have to pump up a spare tire on the road, and it is by no means a pleasure to be forced to wait while one's chauffeur does so. The carrying of a sufficient number of spare tires already inflated helps this condition somewhat, but as the best laid plans of mice and men undoubtedly act according to the proverb, the stock not infrequently runs out. It is then that an efficient tire pump is most ardently desired. The ordinary hand pump is out of date, although still a blessing in time of need. The engine-driven pump is, of course, a tremendous convenience. Many of these pumps do their work very well and without risk to the tires, but there is an element of danger in such pumps. A new and very practical pump which has been brought out by the Globe Manufacturing Company, although operated by hand, is exceedingly easy to handle. There is a long lever which works backwards and forwards, rather than up and down. There is, therefore, no stooping or back-breaking labour. The pump cylinders, of which there are two, are of very large diameter, so that even large tires are quickly inflated. A gage is fitted on top of the pump in plain sight, so that pressure can always be noted without effort. This device marks a forward step in tire pumping.

Sincerity in Italian Furniture at the Hampton Shops

THE sturdy Italian Furniture of the early renaissance by its simplicity of outline and reticence of ornament seems to reflect the very spirit which we of these times are desirous of introducing into the living and reception rooms of our houses.

Hence it is that at the Hampton Shops you will always find those walnut tables with their simply carved and turned supports, the straight backed, square-legged chairs with seats of hardy leather and those plainly paneled credences which serve as sideboards in the dining rooms of today. Nor is it alone the furniture but its Italianate surroundings also which the ripened knowledge of Hampton Shops decorators may be trusted to supply.

"I have found Cutex the quickest, easiest and most effective way of taking care of my nails"

Alice Brady

What cutting does to the cuticle

WHEN you cut the cuticle it is impossible to keep a firm, smooth outline around the base of your nails—every one notices how badly your hands look.

If your cuticle is inclined to push rapidly forward onto the nail surface; if it is difficult for you to keep it from breaking around the nails, from becoming sore and tender, don't cut it away. The more you cut, the more trouble you will have.

Cutex removes surplus cuticle quickly, easily, safely! It is absolutely harmless, and leaves a firm, smooth, thin outline at the base of the nails.

See how lovely this way of manicuring makes your nails look

For your own satisfaction try a Cutex manicure today. Wrap a little absorbent cotton around the end of an orange stick (both come in the Cutex package), dip into the Cutex bottle and work the stick around the base of the nail, gently pressing back the cuticle. Carefully rinse the fingers in clear water, being careful to push the softened cuticle back when drying the hands.

Finish with Cutex Nail White underneath the nails—a soft white cream for removing all stains. Then polish the nails with Cutex Nail Polish.

Below is the Cutex Traveling Manicure Set wrapped in its extremely good-looking Christmas design for Christmas giving. The box itself is beautiful—paper covered to resemble black leather, lined with pink.

The set contains full size packages of the Cuticle Remover, Cutex Nail White, Cutex Paste Polish and Cake Polish, also a flexible steel file, emery boards, orange sticks and cotton. For Christmas this year these sets are especially appropriate. Their price is low—their usefulness no one will question. Sold in all drug and department stores. Price $1.50.

Remove surplus cuticle quickly, easily, safely, without cutting

Remove stains from underneath the nails with Cutex Nail White

Finish with Cutex Nail Polish

If your cuticle shows a tendency to become dry and tough, as the cuticle often does in cold weather after using water on your hands, apply a little Cutex Cuticle Comfort to the base of your nails, to help keep the cuticle soft and pliant.

Now examine your nails!

When you see how smooth a Cutex manicure leaves the skin about the base of your nails—how free it is from ragged edges and rough places that make hangnails, you will wonder how you ever got along without it.

Secure Cutex in any drug or department store. The cuticle remover comes in 35c, 65c and $1.25 bottles. Cutex Nail White is 35c. Cutex Nail Polish in cake, paste, powder, liquid or stick form is only 35c. Cutex Cuticle Comfort is also 35c.

The Cutex Compact set, price 50c, contains trial sizes of the Cuticle Remover, Cutex Nail White, Cutex Cake Polish and Paste Polish; it has also a flexible file, emery board, orange stick and absorbent cotton—all for 50c. If your store cannot supply it, we will be glad to fill your order direct.

them. But after they get over there, we hear very little about them. Nobody begs you to make them sweaters or write them letters. Who does look after them? What can they do with themselves in the few hours that they have off duty? How do they live when they aren't working in the wards? What kind of recreation can they have in their free time?"

The answer to all this lies in the reports of the redoubtable questioner—the Y. W. itself. In twenty base hospitals there are club rooms for the nurses; tennis and polo grounds have been turned over to them for recreational purposes in one place; musical programmes and parties are held wherever possible; tea is served at the hours when the nurses are going on and off duty; French classes are held and have become very popular; there is a little quiet vesper service on Sunday evenings, to remind one of things so easy to forget in the mad life that allows so little time for thought. And after the vesper service there is apt to be cinnamon toast and chocolate, which, after all, is quite in accord with the custom established in Galilee two thousand years ago about feeding the multitude. As for the club rooms themselves, here is a snapshot of one of them.

THE Y. W. C. A. CLUB ROOM

"A background of soft gold coloured curtains against which one sees shaded lights, antique bits of furniture, odd pieces of pottery and china, comfortable chairs, books, couches piled with soft green and gold pillows, and a piano. More than one girl said as she looked around the room on the opening night, 'I know we are just going to love this place.' Another said as she sat on a couch with me for a moment, looking on at the others, 'We're usually too tired to think for ourselves. It's so good to have some one to think for us.'"

"A private who stuck his head in the other day said wistfully, 'We certainly do envy the nurses this house.' And well they may. We have not only the living-room, with its gold coloured lights and hangings, but the office, the kitchen, the storeroom, and, best of all, a little rest room with two beds with white covers and rose coloured comforters, hot water bottles, rose shades on the lights, and little curtained windows.

"A convalescent private has been detailed to keep up our fires in the stoves. A French maid who looks like a gnome out of Grimm's Fairy Tales clumps about the hut in her little wooden shoes, keeping things clean and neat; nurses drop in all ready for an easy chair beside the fire in which to read their letters from home, or to make a cup of bouillon in the middle of the morning, or to sing a bit, gathered about the piano before they go home."

As for the telephone girls and stenographers, they are the forerunners of an army of American Waacs, the Y. W. C. A. believes. And when it remembers the work done by the English Y. W. C. A. for these splendid women, it draws a long breath and prepares for unlimited action. Every two weeks six hundred English girls, nearly all of them strangers to each other, are hustled into barracks in London on their way to the front. One of the initial acts of the Administrator of the Waacs was to turn to the Y. W. C. A. to organize recreation in England and in France—in short, to do for the Auxiliary Corps just what the Y. M. C. A. does for the Army. The American "Y. W." has shouldered its responsibility for American women war workers, and the first thing all units do—college, medical, signal corps, Red Cross, Y. M. C. A. canteen—is to head straight for the Hotel Petrograd the moment they land in Paris. Twelve hundred women patronized it, most of them several times, between December and May of last year, and when one realizes that it is the most thoroughly American thing in Paris, that even the chambermaids talk English, and that it is run by the American Y. W. C. A. at a loss in order to be within the salary requirements of the average woman war worker, one doesn't wonder at the extravagant words of praise from some of its previously homesick young guests. Near the Madeleine, the Opéra, the American Express, and the Red Cross Headquarters, the Hotel Petrograd has its accommodation limit of two hundred taxed to the utmost all the time, and a casual glance around the dining-room any evening gives one a full list of American feminine uniforms.

IN POOR DISTRACTED RUSSIA

Petrograd naturally recalls that other and less agreeable field of Y. W. C. A. activity—poor distracted Russia, de-Romanoffed, to be sure, but super-Trotskyed to the verge of nightmare. The American secretaries were on the ground, and their work was progressing phenomenally before the revolution. Small wonder—considering the type of women—that they refused to leave it for a few bombs and Bolsheviks.

In Moscow the Y. W. C. A. began by giving its time-honoured parties for the girls of two of the big department stores. They came enthusiastically, to the delight of the Russian Committee ladies, most of whom had lost their estates and were devoting their lives to philanthropy. That they were really worth bothering over, these thin little things in short skirts and big braids, was proved by the fact that when the classes opened they didn't choose the frothier subjects. They chose Russian first of all, their own beautiful and difficult language. And then they chose—what so few American girls would ever think of studying unless they simply couldn't get out of it—arithmetic. In Petrograd, too, the interest was so keen that two hundred girls, many of whom worked from eight to six and had to trudge long distances on foot to be present, met to study Russian, French, bookkeeping, arithmetic, stenography, singing, and gymnastics by the light of two small oil lamps and a couple of candles. That they studied English goes without saying. As in the case of the French ouvrières, they clamoured for pictures of the American girl, and one doesn't have to be told that many of the brightest of them are planning to emigrate after the war.

THE DAUNTLESS WOMEN IN GREY

And so in Russia, as well as in France, there are girls who thrill to the thought of America and its chance for everybody, as interpreted by the dauntless women in grey who have gone to them and stayed with them despite danger, despite fatigue, and privation, and loneliness, and oftentimes the scattering of their work before they have had time to see the results they hoped for.

In Lyon there were two secretaries, workers at the Mess Féminin run by the Y. W. C. A. in conjunction with a committee of Frenchwomen for the munition workers at the Parc d'Artillerie. One day, these secretaries got a little letter that somehow sums up the gratitude of young France, France that fills shells, France that works unheard of hours at unheard of tasks, and sometimes dies like Lucienne, and always works and dreams like Léonie, the writer.

Miss L. K.—How is it customary to mark silver, china, or linen wedding gifts? What is the correct signature for a married woman writing a business letter? When a woman marries does she drop her middle name or her surname?

Ans.—All gifts presented to a bride are marked with her maiden initials, but all gifts received after the marriage are marked with her married name. In signing a business letter, whether to strangers or acquaintances, a married woman always signs herself, Mary Brown, while underneath, in parentheses, she puts (Mrs. John Brown). Some brides drop their middle name when they marry, while others drop their surname, but, in our opinion, it is better to drop the middle name, rather than the surname.

Miss M. M. B.—Is it necessary for a bride to wear gloves with a long-sleeved wedding gown? At the wedding reception do both the bride's mother and the groom's mother stand in line before the bridal couple or after, and what is the correct order for the other members of the bridal party?

Ans.—It is not absolutely necessary for a bride who is wearing long sleeves to wear gloves, but the bride's mother and the rest of the family on either side should wear them. It is a sign of a formal occasion, and a wedding, however simple, is always considered in that way. Wedding lines are going out of fashion, but if it is the most convenient way in which the mother of the groom may meet the various friends, then she should stand after the bride and groom. The correct order is as follows: first the mother of the bride, nearest the door, then the bride and groom, after them the mother of the groom, and then the bridesmaids. The other members of the family are grouped about in the room to receive the guests after they have congratulated the bride.

"Dear Ladies:—

"When you read this letter you will think I am very bold and silly to dare to write to you, I who am so little compared with you; but I feel sure that you are both so noble and sincere by nature that you will be a bit indulgent toward a young girl of the Mess who admires you and loves you greatly.

"As an excuse for my action, which must seem very bold to you, I will admit to you that your country has fascinated me for a long time; I know the enlightenment, the independence, and the greatness of America, and it seems to me that one ought to live happily there, unless perhaps it is a dream, since happiness is not of this world.

"You passed my way, and when I saw you at the Mess, so kind and gracious, I could not resist the impulse to thank you for the moments of cheer that you bring among us, and to write some verses for you, which shall be a souvenir of a very foolish bold little French girl, for I am sure that I am the only one who has been so bold. Can you forgive me, dear ladies? You see I can not refrain from speaking to you as to two friends, although I know that a great distance separates us, so if my letter displeases you, I beg of you not to be angry with me; tear up this paper and think no more of it. But I shall be so happy to know you are not angry, dear ladies; you are so good that I go so far as to ask you to be kind enough to send me a word and tell me that you are not too displeased. But if you are, on the contrary, dear ladies, don't send me anything. But then I shall never dare to come back to the Mess for fear that some day you may recognize me.

"Hoping for your good will, please accept my most respectful devotion.

UNE AMIE DE FRANCE."

And here are the verses, just as Léonie wrote them in her lunch hour:

"Chères Miss, généreuses et bonnes,
"Que voulez, aux coeurs attristés,
"Rendre l'espoir et la gaieté,
"En vous l'Amérique rayonne,
"Dans sa noblesse souveraine,
"Et je salue avec fierté
"Ce pays, fleur de liberté,
"Que peut tout captiver sans peine.

"Pour notre France, j'ai rêvé
"Votre indépendance idéale,
"Et lorsque votre main loyale
"S'est étendue pour la sauver
"J'ai compris que pour elle enfin
"La victoire sera certaine,
"Car une indivisible chaîne,
"Unira nos patries demain.

"En attendant l'heure bénie,
"Bien que peu de chose auprès de vous,
"Chères Miss, me permettez vous
"De vous appeler soeurs chéries?
"Peut-être un proche avenir
"Vous éloignera sans retour:
"Mais dans mon coeur pour toujours
"Brillera votre souvenir.

Corneille, La Fontaine, Beaumarchais, de Vigny, De Musset, Augier, Dumas fils, de Baryville, Brieux, Hervieu, Donnay, Bataille, Bernstein, Capus, and Claudel. There is not a single piece in the entire list of thirty-two that is not more worthy of attention than nine out of ten of the plays that are ordinarily produced in the American theatre. Furthermore, we are assured by the general competence of the company that each of these representative works of French dramatic literature will be adequately acted; and we know from past experience that all of them will be staged with intelligence and with excellent taste.

AN IMPORTANT PROGRAMME

By virtue of this programme, the Théâtre du Vieux Colombier deserves to be heralded as the most important theatre in America. In fact, there is no other institution in this country that can even be considered in the same class. The only drawback to a general appreciation of the great service that is being rendered by M. Copeau and his company is the fact that the majority of our theatre-going population can not understand the French language; but surely in New York there is a sufficient number of cultivated people who have lived in France to crowd the Théâtre du Vieux Colombier at every performance. The fact that the theatre is not yet crowded is merely an indication that the glad tidings of its excellence have not yet been conveyed with sufficient emphasis to the proper people.

Think, for a moment, what it would mean to all of us if some American manager should found an analogous theatre in New York which should render to our English drama the same sort of service that M. Copeau is performing for the French. Think of the privilege of attending the same theatre once a week for twenty-five successive weeks, and always seeing a good play, by an important author, well acted and beautifully staged. That such an institution can be organized has been proved by Jacques Copeau; but if ever an American manager should reveal sufficient vision and sufficient enterprise to found a similar theatre for the English drama, those of us who habitually follow the traffic of the stage would feel that the millennium had come.

"THE SECRET"

Five years ago, "The Secret," by Henry Bernstein, was produced in English by David Belasco, with Frances Starr in the leading rôle, and achieved a notable success in the American theatre. It was doubtless for this reason that the play was selected by M. Copeau as the initial offering of his current programme; for it was to be assumed that theatre-goers who were not familiar with the French language would probably prefer to see a piece with which they had been made acquainted previously. Otherwise, it would be difficult to understand this choice; for "Le Secret" is neither a great drama nor an important work of literature, but merely a technical achievement of unusual adroitness.

The work of Henry Bernstein is already so well known in America that it is scarcely necessary to state that his plays are nothing more than tours de force. His plots are cleverly constructed, his characters are true to life, his dialogue is pithy and compact; and yet we always feel by instinct that he is not a great dramatist. The reason for this feeling is that he never heightens our interest in life nor adds to our understanding of it. He lacks the God-given ability to make us care about his characters. We see them suffer, but we do not take them to our hearts and feel their sufferings as our own. His work is too objective, too abstract, to appeal to us as human. But, considered solely as a craftsman, he is one of the most ingenious mechanicians of the drama in the present period.

In "Le Secret," M. Bernstein, for a full half of his play, allows us to think that his heroine is one sort of person; and then turns about, in the second half of the second act, and shows us that she is a totally different sort of person. Amazed at the contradiction of the two opinions of her character which we have held successively, we find ourselves still groping for an explanation of this personal enigma. This explanation is afforded in the third and final act. The author has deferred his exposition till the end of the play, instead of giving it at the beginning. Thereby, he has created what may be called an analytical suspense—a suspense of asking not, "What happens next?" but, "Why did these things happen?"

A considerable section of the second act runs parallel to the third act of "Othello," with the heroine playing the part of Iago; but as yet we have seen no reason to suspect that she is not a generous and honest woman. It is as if Shakspeare had allowed us to see Iago only as he appeared to the eyes of his general—"This fellow's of exceeding honesty"—and had not permitted us to perceive the error until it became evident to Othello himself. Instead of taking the audience into his confidence, as Shakspeare did, M. Bernstein has deliberately deceived his auditors for half the play and then employed the other half to undeceive them. This procedure is not only novel but astonishingly clever; yet, on the other hand, it remains a little bewildering and can scarcely be accepted as a refutation of the traditional maxim that it is unwise to keep a secret from the audience.

"LE MARIAGE DE FIGARO"

"Le Mariage de Figaro" is one of the most entertaining comedies of all time. Age can not wither it nor custom stale; and the recent production of this piece at the Théâtre du Vieux Colombier offered an opportunity for sheer enjoyment that is seldom to be met with in the American theatre. Of course, this celebrated play is not devoid of faults. The plot is too complex, too inconsecutive, too incoherent; and the text is much too long for modern taste. Furthermore, a certain number of the incidents are excessively improbable—the situation, for example, in which the ugly old duenna who is suing Figaro for breach of promise turns out to be his long-lost mother. But, on the other hand, the characters are richly humorous and really human, and the dialogue is wonderfully spirited and witty.

There is a special reason why this comedy should be welcomed in America at the present time. When our thirteen colonies were struggling to establish their existence as free and independent states, they had no greater nor more potent friend than Pierre-Augustin Caron de Beaumarchais. This clever son of a clock-maker of Paris ultimately claimed to have done more than any other man in Europe toward rendering America free; and this claim has been substantiated more and more by recent historical investigations. And now, when we are gloriously answering "Nous voilà" to the soldier, Lafayette, and to the sailor, Rochambeau, we should not forget the witty man of the world who did so much to render popular the new political opinions that soon enfranchised all the nations that were lucky enough to live westward of the Rhine.

On its face, "Le Mariage de Figaro" was merely a comedy of intrigue, compounded freely from materials borrowed unblushingly from many pre-existent authors; but Beaumarchais was clever enough to bury many incendiary ideas beneath his witty verbiage, as an army of Huns might bury bombs beneath the ruins of an evacuated city. The piece was long prohibited by the censor; but Beaumarchais advertised this interdiction to such excellent effect that when the first public performance was permitted, at the Odéon on April 27, 1784, three people were crushed to death in the mob that stormed the portals of the theatre. The hundreds who were lucky enough to get inside were treated to a witty exposition of that new political philosophy which succeeded, only five years later, in overturning the ancien régime. The opinions of Figaro are not yet out of date. In fact, they have recently recurred very frequently in many of the letters to mankind at large that have been written by Woodrow Wilson.

The performance of this famous play exhibited to the very best advantage the varied talents of the actors of the Vieux Colombier; and the scenic arrangements, the costumes, and the lighting were unusually beautiful.

YVETTE GUILBERT

It is a pleasure to announce that the greatest living artist who does anything of any kind upon the stage is still with us in America. Exquisite Hand - Woven Suitings.

Biltmore Hand-Woven Homespuns are sometimes thought to be loose, shaggy sport materials. They are anything but that.

Biltmore Homespuns are the finest suitings on the market today and are the refinement of hand-weaving. We have always clung to the name Biltmore Homespun, however, because no other name represents the honest, old-fashioned method of hand-weaving which is one of the foundations of quality in our fabric. They are closely woven and in two weights—called single and double weaves.

There are over ninety patterns. All are hand-dyed with vegetable and alizarine dyes—no aniline being used—and are strictly hand-woven.

We buy our wool here in the mountains just as it is sheared from healthy, full-grown sheep. We use no lamb's wool, because cloth made from lamb's wool shrinks indefinitely. We use absolutely nothing but new sheep's wool in making Biltmore Homespuns.

The wool is thoroughly washed in boiling Ivory Soap suds, and dyed by hand in the raw state, with the very finest guaranteed alizarine and vegetable dyes. It is then carded, spun and hand-woven on looms of our own make. After that it is thoroughly dry-cleaned in hot gasoline. We then scour and "full" it for two hours in the old-fashioned way in hot Ivory Soap suds, rinse, and dry it on tenter hooks in the sun. Thus, in addition to all the shrinking and cleansing, we produce a cloth almost as well sterilized as a surgical dressing. There is no method known to science whereby a more substantial, more beautiful or more fadeless cloth can be made.

Biltmore Homespuns are not experiments; they have been on the market for years. Were originated by Mrs. George W. Vanderbilt on the famous Biltmore Estate, where they were manufactured until 1917. The Biltmore Industries were purchased entire by Grove Park Inn, Inc., in that year and are operated by the same workers, and every piece of homespun is absolutely guaranteed.

It is guaranteed to keep its shape equal to any woolen cloth made.

Some of our most successful weaves are the blues and browns.

We have made the French Army Sky Blue for a number of years, and it is perfect in color. Some of the wealthiest and most discriminating ladies in the United States have suits of this Sky Blue (Number 49).

Our Brilliant Blue (lighter than navy), flecked with little fibres of white, is not equaled outside of Biltmore Homespun.

American Beauty shade is perfect in its richness of rose tint, and, like every color of Biltmore Homespun, is absolutely fast.

The browns are all that could be desired for softness of tone, yet full of strength of character. Number 117 is a most wonderful mixture of dark and golden browns, finely carded, but showing the little fibres of color in a way that cannot be produced by machine methods.

A most unusual shade, and so popular that we seldom are able to meet the demand, is our Black Sheep's Homespun, being a weave of undyed black sheep's wool with about one-third white wool, producing a soft, rich chocolate brown. We have but a limited amount of this weave because of the scarcity of the wool.

"Autumn" Mixtures no doubt are the most beautiful of all. These are made by mixing as many as eight or nine colors of wool, blending as nearly as possible the shades of the leaves of trees in Autumn. Number 5, for instance, one of our oldest weaves, having been on the market nearly fifteen years, is a mixture of Brilliant Fast Forest Green, Madder Red, Walnut Root Brown, Golden Yellow, Hickory Bark Yellow, Pale Alizarine Blue, White, and a small trace of Sky Purple. The finished cloth is as nearly the color of our mountains in October as could be imagined.

Jet Black is made from Extract of Logwood and comes in three weights.

We make beautiful weaves of black and white in "Pepper and Salt" double weave white warp, double weave black warp, and so on.

Oxford Grey (almost black flecked with white) and Steel Grey with black knots are made especially heavy and are for coats.

We are glad to send samples, but request that they be returned when not needed, as we send them large enough to give an idea of the cloth, and to do so they cost us about ten cents each.

The price of single weaves, single width (28 inches to 30 inches), is $4.00 per yard, and it takes about seven yards to a lady's suit. This is a slight advance over our old prices, due to the great increase in the price of wool, dyes and labor. Double weave, same price.

Coat weights, heavy, $5.00 per yard. Six yards for a coat of average length.

We have a stock of our best weaves, but not an unlimited one, as the government is requiring all the wool produced at present, and probably will continue to do so for some time. Orders for Holidays should be sent in early.

SEEN on the STAGE

French items were written by the famous chansonnier, Aristide Bruant; and Mme. Guilbert also rendered in English several American cowboy songs. In both languages, her work was marvellous; and there is nothing to report from the initial performance except the reassuring fact that several of the most noted actors and actresses of the American theatre were seated in the house and were obviously overwhelmed by the inimitable art of the great woman on the stage.

War, in general, deserves the anathema that was hurled against it by General Sherman; but the present war is not without its compensations, since it has sent to our shores Yvette Guilbert and the company of Le Théâtre du Vieux Colombier. To President Wilson's fourteen conditions of peace, another should be added: we should refuse to agree to any settlement of the affairs of Europe which does not require these delightful artists to remain in America. What would be the use of winning peace if we should lose Yvette Guilbert?

"THE BETTER 'OLE"

The British are not so witty as the French, nor so humorous as the Irish; but they are the most good-humoured people in the world, with the possible exception of their younger cousins on the hither side of the Atlantic. When the history of this great war comes ultimately to be analyzed, it may be found that two factors contributed beyond all others to the winning of the ultimate victory—first, the dauntless valour of the French and, second, the undefeatable good-humour of the British.

Captain Bruce Bairnsfather is one of half a dozen or a dozen artists who have been made famous by the curious chances of the war. Before 1914, he had long been drawing pictures with a pencil and a paint brush; but nobody had ever heard of him. Then, he went to the front with Kitchener's first hundred thousand; and, to relieve the tedium of life in the trenches, he took to making sketches, on odd scraps of paper, of humorous incidents that had occurred spontaneously amid the mud and misery of Flanders. Some of these he sent home, addressed to the editors of various magazines; and, on the occasion of his first leave to "blighty," he was utterly amazed to discover that his name had become a household word among millions of people. Among all the cartoonists who have been pushed into prominence by the present world occasion, no other is now more noted except that vigorous unneutral neutral, Louis Raemaekers—citizen of Holland and pathfinder for the world.

Captain Bairnsfather is not a great draftsman, nor even a particularly able artist from any technical point of view. But he was endowed by nature with a special aptitude for appreciating and recording the good-humour of the British Tommy amid moments of adversity. In those actions which are now generally known as the first and second battles of Ypres, nothing saved the line and saved the channel ports except the quite miraculous ability of the British and Canadian troops to accept the most terrific punishment as a sort of sublimated joke. This spirit has been recorded more eloquently through the cartoons of Captain Bairnsfather than through any other medium. This famous humorist has told us that his most good-humoured jokes—those jokes that have been laughed at by millions of people—were conceived and elaborated at moments of great misery when the only alternatives that could be thought of were to draw a funny picture or go mad. Some of his drawings were produced "in hospital"—like Henley's poems—when he was lying on a cot. Perhaps they are the funniest of all.

Captain Bairnsfather has disclaimed in public any credit for invention; he claims, rather, that the humorous incidents that he has recorded have all been repeated from first-hand observation. His famous characters—Old Bill, and Alf, and Bert, and all the rest—were actual before his vision as an artist transfigured them into reality. His humour is not personal and private—it is, instead, the humour of two million men of England who have wallowed in the slime of Flanders, and done their bit, and taken whatever might be coming to them, for the sake of something not quite comprehensible, but vaguely beautiful and recognizably uproarious, which called upon them to keep smiling, lest they should suddenly be snatched away by death at some moment when a smile was absent from their lips.

The entertainment entitled "The Better 'Ole" is a dramatization of Captain Bairnsfather's drawings, made by the artist himself in collaboration with a colleague, Captain Arthur Eliot. From the technical point of view, this entertainment is amateurish, both in the original sense and in the debased sense of this equivocal word that is so often used and so seldom understood. The plot is artificial and incredible; many of the stage devices are inexpedient and unprofessional; but the characters are real, the dialogue is richly humorous, and the general tone of the intention is fresh and free and thoroughly delightful.

It is not at all excessive to assert that "The Better 'Ole" is the most entertaining of all the many war plays that have been produced in New York since the autumn of 1914. If war is hell—as General Sherman stated—it follows logically that war must also be as funny as hell; and, though a printing of this syllogism might have seemed profane in former years, the reader will perhaps be willing to accept it now as an indication of the mood of this ingratiating and delightful entertainment.

"The Better 'Ole" has been produced in quite the proper spirit, at the Greenwich Village Theatre, by Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Coburn. The cast is excellent; the incidental music, directed by Elliott Schenck, is finely rendered; and the scenery, designed and painted by Ernest Albert, is more than merely adequate. The practiced hand of Percival Knight is evident in the verve and gusto of the stage direction. Considered all in all, the first American production of "The Better 'Ole" must be regarded as a very fine occasion.

"THE RIDDLE: WOMAN"

"The Riddle: Woman"—despite an enigmatic title which shows no pertinence to the text—is a play that is soundly based and solidly erected. In fact, the workmanship of this dramatic fabric is so admirable from the technical point of view that the observer is reminded quite emphatically of the unforgotten days of twenty years ago. This piece was adapted from the Danish of C. Jacobi by Charlotte L. Wells and Dorothy Donnelly. Most of us are already acquainted with Miss Wells as a poet and with Miss Donnelly as an actress; but the unknown C. Jacobi must have been a rather clever person in his time. We should be duly thankful to his two American adaptors for drawing attention to his prowess.

"The Riddle: Woman" is a well-made play ("une pièce bien faite"); and it is rather a relief, in the present desultory period, to see a drama that has been consistently and conscientiously constructed. It is also a relief to see a piece that is excellently acted in all of its important parts. The cast of this production includes Bertha Kalich, Albert Bruning, Chrystal Herne, and A. E. Anson. All of these excellent performers add honour to their noted names; and the obvious delight of the theatre-going public at the opportunity to welcome a serious rendition of a serious drama will afford them a sufficient recompense.

The play, though excellent according to its kind, is so thoroughly traditional that it does not warrant a detailed analysis. In this instance, the parts are greater than the whole; for the acting is more memorable than the text. Bertha Kalich is a very fine artist—so fine that it would not be easy to assemble a jury of her peers to pass judgment on her work; and, in the present production, her efforts are very ably seconded by those of the featured members of her company.

"PERKINS"

Before the eyes of his own public, Henry Miller has become a mystery. His theatre is the most beautiful and tasteful in New York, with the single exception of The Little Theatre; and it is always an æsthetic joy to step into this theatre and to become, for an evening, the guest of Mr. Miller. He is one of the ablest stage directors in this country, and assuredly the finest of the so-called older school. His productions, according to their kind, are always utterly impeccable. But—by some perversity of mind—he has surrendered, in recent years, to a habit of producing plays that, in themselves, are unworthy of serious consideration.

"Perkins," if produced by anybody else, would have been sneered immediately off the stage and would have been sent summarily to the storehouse to join "Anthony in Wonderland" and "The Fountain of Youth." But the obvious merits of the acting and the stage-direction disposed the immediate reviewers to be rather more than charitable toward the play. The sad truth appears to be that either Mr. Miller is deficient in the faculty for picking plays or else that he is ill advised. In either case, it is almost pitiable to see him wasting his talents on the production of such a piece as "Perkins."

"Perkins" is the new name bestowed by Mr. Miller upon a comedy by Douglas Murray which was originally produced in London under the title of "The Man from Toronto." The piece is utterly lacking in originality. It starts out with the idea that two people who have never seen each other are condemned to ultimate marriage by the perversity of a very rich old man who has made his will to this effect and died. When the hero is about to call upon the heroine, she decides to receive him not in her own person but in the guise of her parlour maid. Thereby, she attests her faith in the theory that she is more familiar with the text of "She Stoops to Conquer" than the man from Toronto. She wins this bet. The uncouth hero has never heard of Goldsmith's comedy, nor even seen so recent a rifacimento of this famous work as "Come Out of the Kitchen." Consequently, he falls into the net that has been spread by the heroine. But, of course, the progress of the plot is very dull, since it has been foreseen, since the earliest moments of the initial act, by everybody in the front of the house. Why Mr. Miller should waste his time on the production of such a worthless play as this remains a mystery.

"NOT WITH MY MONEY"

It is a sad day for the public when successful authors begin to fish up forgotten manuscripts that have long lain dormant in their trunks. It is scarcely possible for a critical observer to resist an inclination to believe that "Not With My Money," by Edward Clark, was written before "De Luxe Annie" and "Coat Tales." Mr. Clark, in the recent past, has deserved consideration by virtue chiefly of his cleverness and his originality; but the present piece is neither original nor clever. In subject matter, it repeats the basic theme of "Get-Rich-Quick" Wallingford; and, in treatment, is also entirely traditional.

We are introduced, at the outset, to a "confidence man" who has honestly decided to reform. He picks up a paper and reads an advertisement asking for a person who is competent to superintend the dispersal of a charitable fund of seven million dollars. The existence of this advertisement taxes our credulity; and the ease with which the "confidence man" secures the job draws still further against our willingness to accept the necessary antecedent subject matter for the play.

The hero of this "crook comedy" attains his objects without undergoing any struggle that is fought out on the stage. The decisive moments of the argument are assumed to occur off stage, behind the hero's back. This is the reason why the story is not so dramatic in its rendering as it ought to be. "Not With My Money" is one of the many plays that fail because the author has neglected to make the best use of his material.

"A STITCH IN TIME"

Among the many projects of the theatre, the Cinderella story is one of those that always in the past have proved most popular. This project, in recent seasons, was successfully employed by Edward Childs Carpenter in "The Cinderella Man" and was transmuted into eternal literature by Sir James Mathew Barrie in "A Kiss for Cinderella."

After these examples, it might have seemed a little temerarious for Oliver D. Bailey and Lottie M. Meaney to launch another version of the self-same story, entitled "A Stitch in Time." But, since Mr. Bailey is one of the lessees of the Fulton Theatre, the reason for this exhibition remains no longer problematical. "A Stitch in Time," like "Perkins," is one of those plays that remind the public of many other pieces that have been witnessed in the past. Just as "Perkins" is reminiscent of Goldsmith's memorable masterpiece, "A Stitch in Time" is reminiscent, at its climax, of "Lady Windermere's Fan." This pointed instance, however, is only one of many in a piece that is thoroughly cut and dried. The leading part is acted very well by Irene Fenwick; but many of the other characters are badly played.

Very extraordinary and very chic was the small black satin hat worn recently at the Avignon. Monkey fur fell well below the edge of the hat in front and quite to the shoulder in the back

ITS HEART ON ITS SLEEVE

Very lovely she looked as she spoke from one of the booths, wearing a gown of black velvet with a band of sable running straight down the front and a similar band at the back accentuating the slender length of her figure. With this she wore a cape of black velours collared with sable and a tobacco brown velvet hat crowning her bright hair.

Velvet has undoubtedly become one of the most popular fabrics of the season. One sees it everywhere, in all sorts of articles of apparel. Many of the best looking hats of the season are made of this material combined with fur. Mrs. William Woodward is wearing a smart hat of black velvet with a turned-up brim of beaver. This supplements one of the severely simple well-tailored suits which Mrs. Woodward usually wears. In this case, it is made of a dull grey cloth with a deep opening at the front from which a one-sided lingerie frill emerges. Tiny lingerie frills flare out below the sleeves.

Grey is also the colour of the smartly simple suit which Mrs. Perry Belmont is wearing with an exceedingly good looking hat and fox furs. This hat is taupe in colour, high of crown, with an infinitesimal rolling brim and, around the very top of the crown, thin pompoms of fine taupe feathers.

Trimnings of these bristling feathers of the softer ostrich, put on in such a way as to form an open fringe, and of the new monkey fur are one of the most interesting recent developments in millinery. Very extraordinary and very chic is the small black satin hat worn recently at the Avignon, the restaurant which has lately been opened under the Ritz management in one of the new apartment houses on Park Avenue. The fur, which was of extraordinary length, was apparently put on in a flat circle on the crown of the hat, and it fell over the edge well below the hat at the front and quite to the shoulder at the back. When the wearer moved her head the effect was extraordinary in the extreme.

The Victorian hat is still with us, and is always very smart and becoming when rightly made. The real chic in the Victorian hat consists in keeping it small, and this fact was evidently understood thoroughly by the wearer of the little black velvet hat trimmed with long curling cock feathers with beautiful dull lights, who lunched at the Ritz the other afternoon.

The chic in the Victorian hat consists in keeping it small like this trifle of black velvet and curling cock feathers seen at the Ritz. With this was worn one of the black velours capes for which there is such a vogue; it was collared with beaver, one of the smart furs of the season and a Jewish mother. Showing an early aptitude for drawing he was sent at the age of sixteen to the Odessa School of Art where he studied under Ladijinsky and Kostandi. Five years later Petrograd lured him and he entered the Imperial Academy of Arts, attending first the classes of Kovalevsky and later those of the well-known genre painter, Kardovsky. It was not long, however, before the forces of revolution that were fermenting beneath the placid surface of autocracy began to work their influence on the impressionable young artist, and even before completing his work at the Academy he had developed a distinctively personal vision of form and color. Rather extensive travels throughout his own country resulted in a number of sensitively seen landscapes. Some portraits were done about this period, a period which culminated in the exhibition of a number of his works at the Salon d'Automne in Paris and the award on the part of that body in the form of an election as Sociétaire.

There followed the scenery for the production, at Mme. Vera Kommissarjevskaya's Theatre in Petrograd, of Hugo von Hofmannstahl's "Marriage of Zobéide" and Anisfeld's commission by Serge Diaghileff to undertake important settings for the Russian Ballet. But before entering upon this phase of his life which has so close a connection with art revolution in Russia, it is important to know something of the conditions in Russian artistic life.

In the last decade of the last century all branches of art rose in revolt against the realistic movement exemplified in literature by Dostoieffsky and Tolstoi, in music by Moussorgsky and Dargomijsky, and in painting by Repin, Perov, and Levitan. As always the revolution came slowly and evidences of its coming might easily be detected in some of the elder men. Its proclamation, however, soon took the form of an unswerving and intense individualism. It can in no sense of the word be called a school, and its prophets unto this day show no intention of dwarfing their individuality through any connection with one another.

Between the compositions of Scriabin and Stravinsky—to draw an example from music and also one with which Americans are familiar—there is an impassable gulf. Their work stands for different ideals, different purposes. Yet both are essentially individualistic and both represent the forces that are driving art in Russia to—what? The answer is in the lap of Time.

ANISFELD AND THE RUSSIAN BALLET

Serge Diaghileff's was the task of coordinating these personalities in that attempted union of the arts called the Russian Ballet, and it is his glory that at no time did he attempt to subordinate the personality of any of these free spirits. Of the painters who were called upon to devise settings and costumes for the Diaghileff organization Anisfeld was not the least, though his fame was obscured in the popular furore over Bakst. Yet for the Russian Ballet and for other theatrical enterprises in Russia he contributed to the production of "Islamey," "Les Preludes," "Egyptian Nights," "The Seven Daughters of the Ghost King," "Les Sylphides," and, with the co-operation of Golovin, Rerikh, Serov, and others, the epoch-marking productions of "Ivan the Terrible" and "Boris Godounoff." To even the most casual eye there is a marked similarity between the forest scene in the Metropolitan production of Moussorgsky's opera and "The Birch Grove" shown in the Brooklyn Institute.

The first quality of Anisfeld's work is its comprehensive versatility. Besides his scenic decoration there are paintings of every variety of subject. Portraits, landscapes, fantasies, genre pictures, and still life—all are to be found in the exhibition. Yet through them all runs the predominate feeling for the emotional value. A clear keen vision his that would see into the very heart of his subject and derive therefrom that which will appeal to the emotional side of us. As he himself has said, he paints what he feels, and this feeling, be it understood, is always in terms of colour.

TRANSPARENT COLOUR ABOVE ALL ELSE

Above all else, Anisfeld is a colourist. Colour predominates, great rich masses of it, tingling with life and light. In his work there is none of that reasoning logical attempt to set up scientifically the play of light that we find in the impressionists; their methods are entirely foreign to his. More like Cézanne, the light is applied in the colour and through the medium of broad planes that shift with the shifting of light upon them. Above all else is the quality of transparency that illumines all his colour.

This transparency results from the clearest of colour vision. Apparently in his painting of a canvas Anisfeld does not touch the brush until the vision in his own mind and imagination is clear, for there is no piling up of masses of paint to secure body of tone. Yet how much deeper and substantial is this colour than any we have ever seen. In it is the breath of life itself. Like Stravinsky's orchestration, the colour of an Anisfeld painting derives its value from the simplest of means. As Stravinsky can make a single instrument tell more than all the Strauss piling of mass on mass, so Anisfeld allows a single hue to speak his eloquence.

For that matter, Anisfeld's composition has borrowed much from music. His canvases are veritable symphonies in colour, symphonies that spring from the well-ordered and definitely intentioned imagination of genius. There is in them the harmonic richness and the emotional force of the Orient. The civilizations that flourished in the valleys of the Euphrates and the Tigris have reached their long hands of benediction over him. The Jewish blood within him proclaims its message of brilliant imagery in his colour and fantastic composition.

His art requires no searching intellectual attitude for its appreciation. The effect of colour and composition are as direct as the appeal of great music. Let the eye drink in this colour as the ear drinks in the colour of music; that is the only requisite for its full enjoyment.

The Secret of a Good Complexion is Really no Secret at all

BITTER winds and dust—water and soap; these are the things that deplete the natural oils of the skin and destroy its beauty in a way that is really alarming.

Help Nature to replenish these natural oils and you have solved the secret of a good complexion.

When the skin is protected so that the natural oils are not so easily taken away, age does not wither nor wrinkle the skin—its delicate texture is never wholly lost.

SEM-PRAY JO-VE-NAY (Sempre Giovine) assists Nature in doing what Nature is sometimes unable to do herself unaided. It is a skin protector and skin cleanser—a face cream in cake form.

SEM-PRAY JO-VE-NAY is a pure cake of solidified oils. It does not grow hair. It will not enlarge the pores.

Apply SEM-PRAY JO-VE-NAY and Sempray Face Powder before going out and you will never again know what it is to have chapped hands or face.

PLAYING THE FRONT

the boys were somewhat inhospitable and sent them Hunward with a couple of air-shells. Later the same night we repeated at a similar artillery station and then motored forty miles back to our hotel."

These blithe Ford-touring units of five represent the real under-fire front-line trench-men of the Over-There Theatre League's entertainers that are to occupy France for the Americans at Christmas time. There will also be a company playing New York successes in the leave areas, with Mary Boland, Mary Hampton, Minnie Dupree, and Sidney Shields taking turns at being maids and leading women, thus helping to make the stage safe for democracy. Then, too, there are the Camp Directors, — Dorothy Donnelly, Willamene Wilkes, Dallas Tyler, Clara Blandick, and Laura Sherry, each of whom has an ingénue and a share in the twenty crates of costumes sent by the League to Paris. For the rest of her company and all of her scenery the Camp Director calls on the Army, itself, and the Army responds with a joyful whoop and much genuine talent in the various plays chosen for production somewhere in France. These, too, will play the leave areas.

Yet after all, it isn't the boy on leave to whom our hearts go out. To be anywhere, out of mud, is to have colossal good fortune.

A SERMON FROM HENRY STREET

"I used to live on Henry Street," said a girl who swept from jazz to a sermon and back again at the Neighborhood Playhouse in New York just before she went across. "I was born in Odessa—born to talk Yiddish just as I'm talking now. How many of you have boys over there?"

A forest of hands were raised above shawled heads. The jazz girl leaned forward, staring into their faces.

"Mayn't I take a kiss from every mother here to her boy in France?" she said softly. She didn't use the grown-up words, but the little syllables of childhood on Henry Street.

The faces lit up, smiling, understanding, even the darkest of them. Here was one girl, one singing dancing girl who had come from Henry Street. They liked that.

"Write to your boys," said the jazz girl. "Tell them to say, 'Hello, Rita—my mother saw you in the Neighborhood Playhouse.'"

After all, what makes Christmas? It isn't the gifts, though a pair of socks and a plum cake may bring a merry little glow of their own to the dimmest of dugouts. Christmas is just mainly home folks—was, is, and ever shall be. And, to the vast bulk of our Army, the nearest thing to home folks will be that muddy little Fordful of girls.

BRINGING HOME FOLKS TO THE FRONT

Can't you see them—past the lighted candles of your own tree—lurching along the gullied roads from Hut to Hut, from ruined town to ruined town? They got up with the dawn, but the bitter twilight shuts down yellowly, and the stars come out, and the wind cuts as only a French wind can, and still they don't go home.

By and by the last stand is played, the last steps are danced. They are escorted riotously to their Ford. They wave a last good-bye, a stage good-bye as fresh and as light and as brave as the one the other men had from them at noon, fifty miles back through the mud. The Army goes away lingeringly, whistling "K-K-Katie," its collar up to its ears.

The road runs on into the dark. Tired? They could die. The rouge stands out on their white faces. Blanche's fan is lost, and Stella's chiffons are all crushed like dead rose leaves.

Then—oh, it was bound to happen—there's a voice in the darkness.

"No show? Nothing? All day long? The poor boys! Why, yes, I guess so—what say, girls? We're all in and there isn't a note left in anybody's voice. But we'll try. . . ."

"Good old guitar," says Miss Evie ten minutes later, standing up on the back seat of the Ford to give an entirely unpremeditated performance at quarter to midnight for the benefit of a bunch of railway troops that thought Santa Claus had forgotten them. "You'll have to cut the steps out, Stella, but after all I never thought Cinderella needed them." Dear boys—dear, dear boys. . . . Why, Stella, child, you're crying."

Youthful Beauty For Any Woman

The secret of a youthful face will be sent to all women who see their beauty vanishing or who have facial lines, wrinkles, or other disfigurements caused by age, illness or anything else.

Multi-tudes of women have found the secret of renewed beauty in Kathryn Murray's remarkable which remove lines, "crow's feet" and wrinkles; fill up hollows; give roundness to scrawny necks; lift up sagging corners of the mouth and clear up muddy or sallow skins without the use of cosmetics, creams, massage, masks, plasters, straps, vibrators, "beauty" treatments, or other artificial means. The Kathryn Murray Method will show you how five minutes daily with these simple facial exercises will work wonders. This information is free to all who ask for it.

FOR THE HOSTESS

HONEY CUSTARDS

There are many ways in which honey may be used in desserts. The following makes a delicious dish. Beat five eggs slightly, taking care not to make them foamy. Add slowly one-half cup of honey, four cups of scalded milk, one-eighth teaspoonful of powdered cinnamon, and one-fourth teaspoonful of salt. Bake in cups, which should be set in a pan of water in a moderate oven.

A custard which does double duty may be eaten for itself or poured as a sauce over sliced oranges or other fruit. It can also be used instead of cream on gelatine desserts. To make it, mix one-third of a cup of honey with one-eighth of a teaspoonful of salt and three egg yolks. Scald two cups of milk, and pour this over the eggs, and cook in a double boiler until the mixture thickens.

TWO FROZEN HONEY DESSERTS

Honey adds delight to frozen dainties. To make a honey ice cream mix three-fourths of a cup of delicately flavoured honey with one quart of thin cream and freeze at once. Another frozen dessert, honey mousse, requires a little more time in its preparation. Beat four eggs lightly and slowly pour them over one cup of hot honey. Cook until the mixture thickens. After it is cool, add one pint of whipped cream. Put the mixture into a mould, pack in salt and ice, and let it stand three or four hours.

HONEY CHARLOTTE RUSSE

Honey and cream make a particularly delicious combination. Place one-half of a cup of fine honey in a pan set in ice water. Whip one quart of cream and add it to the cold honey, mixing the two well. With half-a-dozen or more lady fingers line a suitable and attractive dish and fill it with the honey and cream. This must be served cold.

HONEYED STRAWBERRIES

For use with fruits, honey is very satisfactory. The famous Bar-le-Duc currants are cooked in honey after having had the seeds removed, it is said, with a gold needle so that no steely taste mars the fine natural flavour. Strawberries may be preserved with honey in the following manner. Mix equal parts of fresh ripe strawberries and fine flavoured honey, measuring by weight. Dry in a warm oven; put into carefully sterilized glasses, and cover with paraffin.

HONEY APPLE SAUCE

Cut two quarts of apples into small pieces. Make a syrup of two cups of honey, one cup of vinegar, and one teaspoonful of powdered cinnamon. Cook the apples, a few at a time, in the syrup until they take on a clear transparent look. Then pour the syrup which remains over the apples.

HONEY FILLING OR ICING

A honey filling for layer cakes is also very useful as an icing, especially if the cake is to be dusted with chopped nuts. It is very soft and may be made in quantities sufficient to last for several weeks, as its keeping qualities are excellent. To make it, boil together one cup of granulated sugar and one-fourth cup of water. Add one-fourth cup of honey, taking care that it does not boil over. Cook until a drop keeps its form in cold water. Beat the white of one egg stiff while letting the syrup cool, then pour the syrup over the egg, and beat continuously until the mixture will hold its shape. This filling is rather soft for the top of a cake, but holds nuts or chopped fruits very well.

HONEY CANDIES

Boil together two cups of honey and one cup of heavy cream until the mixture forms a ball when dropped into cold water, stirring continuously to keep it from scorching. Pour into buttered pans; when slightly cool cut in squares. This is a particularly delicious recipe.

Mix together one cup of chopped figs, one cup of chopped raisins, two cups of chopped candied cherries, half a cup of chopped blanched almonds, half a cup of English walnuts, and a cup of honey. Press into a pan, cut into squares, and roll in powdered sugar. Another delicious confection is made with walnuts. Boil two cups of honey, one cup of boiling water, and four tablespoonfuls of butter to a hard ball; drop from a tablespoon on a buttered tin, pressing halves of English walnuts around the edge of each before it gets cold.

STEAMED HONEY BROWN BREAD

A very delicious brown bread owes its delicate flavour to the addition of honey. The recipe is as follows: mix together one cup of yellow cornmeal, two cups of graham flour, and one teaspoonful of salt; add two cups of sour milk, two-thirds of a cup of honey, and one and one-half teaspoonfuls of soda dissolved in one tablespoonful of boiling water. After mixing well, stir in one cup of seeded raisins. Steam for three hours in covered tins, well greased. One-pound baking-powder boxes are very appropriate, as the bread slices well in that shape. The cans should not be filled more than two-thirds full as the bread swells in cooking.

HONEY AND NUT BRAN MUFFINS

The following recipe will make sixteen large muffins, each of which may be considered a hundred-calorie ration: in a large pan sift one cup of flour, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of soda, and one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt; stir in two cups of bran. Make a hole in the centre of the flour and pour in one and one-half cups of milk, one-half cup of honey, and one tablespoonful of melted butter. Mix well, stirring in three-fourths of a cup of finely chopped English walnuts. Drop into gem pans and bake twenty-five to thirty minutes in a hot oven. Each muffin contains about two grams of protein.

HONEY SANDWICHES

For sandwiches, honey is delicious mixed with minced pecan meats or almonds and spread between small baking-powder biscuits. It may also be added to cream cheese and chopped nuts as a filling for bread of any kind.

REEDCRAFT DESK SET

MOST charming is this REEDCRAFT writing desk with the graceful circular lines. Plate glass top faced with silk damask to match chair cushion; five roomy drawers, pockets for paper, envelopes, etc., around entire top.

Chair matches the table, as does the beautiful floor lamp with silk lined shade and fringe.

This REEDCRAFT set would make a very happy gift as would many other pieces of aristocratic REEDCRAFT. Hand-wrought, built to wear and give satisfaction for many years.

RESTWEL PILLOWS

Are your pillows still soft and comfortable?

A Restwel Pillow will be comfortable always. Day after day, year after year, it will keep its original softness and buoyancy.

It may seem strange that one pillow will remain comfortable while another gets hard and matted. But there has been progress and improvement even in the manufacture of the familiar Feather Pillow.

Our booklet, "The Pedigree of Two Pillows", tells how Restwels are made—how a scientific treatment preserves the natural buoyancy of the ALL NEW feathers in each pillow by removing or destroying all dirt and animal matter, even in the quills. Send for free copy of this booklet.

Restwel Pillows are sold in Department and Furniture Stores throughout the United States. We will gladly send the name of a nearby dealer on request.

Governmental restrictions on furniture

America's war needs have made necessary a far-reaching, governmental program of conservation in the furniture industry.

Under this ruling all furniture makers must not only materially reduce the number of their designs but must also make many changes in manufacture which will greatly restrict the present wide range of selection.

The Berkey & Gay Furniture Company is in cordial agreement with this new program. The nation's war essentials must come first.

At the time of the new ruling thousands of pieces of Berkey & Gay furniture, in a wide variety of patterns and materials, were under the process of manufacture. The ruling does not restrict the completion and sale of these pieces.

Neither does it restrict the sale of our large reserve stock in Grand Rapids and New York and the stock now in the stores of our hundreds of dealers. This means that for a time at least Berkey & Gay furniture will be obtainable in practically its original variety.

But no matter how the war may restrict Berkey & Gay quantity, the quality will remain the same. Our famous inlaid Shop-Mark will continue to be an honored symbol of excellence in material, in cabinet work and design. Berkey & Gay Furniture Company, 450 Monroe Avenue, Grand Rapids, Michigan.

BERKEY & GAY
FURNITURE

A new and comprehensive exhibit comprising thousands of pieces of Berkey & Gay furniture may be seen at our New York showrooms, 113-119 West 40th St., or at Grand Rapids. Visitors should be accompanied by, or have a letter of introduction from, their furniture dealer.

The Prodigal Gown

IT was the old gown hanging in my wardrobe awaiting its final dismissal. One day I saw an ad. telling how MME. ROSE could utilize my materials making them into gowns beautiful in line, and attractive in their up-to-dateness.

I looked at the gown again, but without much faith I sent it away to await results. I thought that it might do for a few unimportant occasions.

THEN—one morning not long after, the package arrived. I was so eager I tore off the wrappings hastily—and I beheld—could it be possible that this was my old gown—why it was marvelous! Individual artistic touches gave it the imported appearance.

I tried it on, and looked at it critically from this angle, from that, but I was so delighted that I exclaimed I would wear it the very next day to Mrs. C's. reception.

It received many delightful compliments from a host of acquaintances. I whispered the secret to a few of my intimate friends—and then they decided to look over their wardrobes and see what MME. ROSE could do for them.

Send your gowns to MME. ROSE at her expense. She will quote prices and full particulars. If same are not entirely satisfactory gowns will be returned to you by express prepaid.

NEW BOOKS!

Doctor Danny

By RUTH SAWYER

This new book gives us a series of pictures, in sunshine and rain, from the life of a man who practically dominated a little Irish community in Donegal. We see the whimsical, fantastical, and tender sides of the man, the things that stand out in the life of Doctor Danny. The book goes from boyhood on. Doctor Danny has already won for himself a strong, enthusiastic public since his appearance in "Herself, Himself, and Myself." From the beginning, when Padraic pipes past the Lazy Bush on his way to play the death music, to the end, where Doctor Danny fulfills his love promise, the book deals with the big dramatic moments in Doctor Danny's own life and the lives of his people.

Edgewater People

By MARY E. WILKINS FREEMAN

Here are stories of Four Villages and the people who made them. The original village becoming impossible, had split up into four different communities—yet with the same old families ruling them in a patriarchal fashion. These pages give an insight into the individual standing of each village, stamped by the first characteristics that were never wholly lost. The characters are taken from all walks of life—from Sarah Edgewater, lonely in her wealth and traditions, to the old man who spent his time roaming the fields.

The Reclaimers

By MARGARET HILL McCARTER

Here is the fascinating tale of a young girl, an orphan, pretty, reared in luxury, who inherits a land claim in the Sage Brush country in Western Kansas. She decides to give up her life of idleness to fight her own way to independence by living on her ranch, but finds that it is nothing but a "blow-out" land . . . acres and acres of sand on the edge of which she meets romance. In what manner, is the big secret of the book, the plot of which is unfolded in such a delightful way that it will charm all who read it.

Frontispiece. Half Cloth, $1.50

Land's End

By WILBUR DANIEL STEELE

"Mr. Steele's volume of short stories is first and foremost a book for those who love the sea. The pungent odor of the salt marshes pervades its pages, the beat and thunder of the great waves surge through it. . . . Weird sometimes, dramatic always, never 'wordy' or over-detailed, this volume is the expression of an unusual talent and an unusual artistry. Innumerable stories have been written about fisherfolk but few are the writers who have succeeded in getting into their stories so much of the force and mystery and legend-evoking quality of the sea. 'Land's End' is a very welcome book." New York Times.

The above garment designed by Miss Helen Boyne

"B. B." Laces

—appeal to women who appreciate the exquisite daintiness, exclusive designs, and superior wearing qualities of Hand Made Laces, yet who are opposed to extravagant purchases.

"B. B." Laces are exact reproductions of Real Hand Made Laces, even to the soft creamy shade which adds tone and distinction to the garment. Their possession is a source of never-ending satisfaction to the wearer both because of their appeal to cultivated tastes and in the knowledge that their purchase was a sane economy.

To identify the genuine "B. B." Laces, look for this circular trade-mark on every twelve yards. You will then be sure of getting laces which are without a peer in wearing quality.

The genuine "B. B." Laces are sold in all the better retail stores, and in addition will be found on high grade lingerie in ready-to-wear departments and specialty shops.

The Winds of Chance

By REX BEACH

Here is Beach's Alaska at its best—the epic days that were lived by the thousands at White Horse—the great human side of the gold rush. And here is 'Poleon Doret again, the singing, sunny, clean-hearted 'Poleon! You met him in "The Barrier" perhaps. Humor? Beach has not forgotten it. He has given us a pair of quarrelling old miners who can't work together and yet can't separate . . . one of the most amusing things he has ever done.

The Seven Purposes

By MARGARET CAMERON

This book is a study in psychic phenomena by an author well known in other fields and absolutely new in this one, into which, she protests, she has been drafted against her will.

Intelligent, highly educated, hard-headed, practical persons, both men and women, of intellectual attitudes ranging from atheistic to religious, have been absolutely convinced of the genuineness of this material.

Sylvia Scarlett

By COMPTON MACKENZIE

"The broad canvas which forms the background for the character of Sylvia is crowded with a diversity of figures, all of them very well drawn. . . . Mr. Mackenzie is unquestionably one of the most notable among the little group of young English authors and there is in this tale of Sylvia Scarlett a certain fine prodigality which increases one's admiration for his capabilities."—New York Times.

Foes

By MARY JOHNSTON

In a vivid, colorful way is given this romance of old Scotland. Love and hatred, rebellion and revenge run, side by side and through the smoke of battle and clashing of the claymore stand out three figures—one a beautiful girl—the others, two men who love her.

Choose Wisely They Differ in Value From 7 to 10-Fold

The large package of Quaker Oats costs from 30 to 32 cents. So does a pound of round steak at this writing—or a pound of fresh halibut.

But, measured in calories—the standard energy unit—they differ in value as follows:

The Quaker Oats package yields	6221	calories
The pound of round steak yields	890	"
The pound of halibut yields	565	"

Quaker Oats gives you, for the same money, about eight times the calory value of meat foods, on the average.

On that basis, each dollar spent for Quaker Oats buys as much as $8 in meats.

It buys as much as $20 in some foods.

And Quaker Oats is vastly better food. It is better-balanced, more complete. It is rich in needed minerals.

The oat is almost the ideal food, both in flavor and nutrition.

Make Quaker Oats your breakfast. Use it to cut your meat bills. Mix it with your flour foods.

It means lower cost of living.

It means better food for all.

Quaker Oats

Just the Cream of the Oats

The exquisite flavor of Quaker Oats is due to selected grains. We flake the queen oats only—just the big, plump grains.

We get but ten pounds from a bushel. When you ask for Quaker Oats you get this extra flavor without extra price. It pays.

12 to 13c and 30 to 32c Per Package

Except in Far West and South

Quaker Oats Bread

1½ cups Quaker Oats (uncooked)
2 teaspoons salt
2 cups boiling water
¼ cup lukewarm water
½ cup sugar
1 cake yeast
5 cups flour

Mix together Quaker Oats, salt and sugar. Pour over two cups of boiling water, let stand until lukewarm. Then add yeast which has been dissolved in ¼ cup lukewarm water, then add 5 cups of flour.

Knead slightly, set in a warm place, let rise until light (about 2 hours). Knead thoroughly, form into two loaves and put in pans. Let rise again and bake about 50 minutes. If dry yeast is used, a sponge should be made at night with the liquid, the yeast and a part of the white flour.

This recipe makes two loaves.

Quaker Oats Muffins

¾ cup Quaker Oats (uncooked), 1½ cups flour, 1 cup scalded milk, 1 egg, 4 level teaspoons baking powder, 2 tablespoons melted butter, ½ teaspoon salt, 3 tablespoons sugar. Turn scalded milk on Quaker Oats. Let stand five minutes; add sugar, salt and melted butter; sift in flour and baking powder, mix thoroughly and add egg well beaten. Bake in buttered gem pans.

Quaker Oats Cookies

Mix dry 2 cups Quaker Oats (uncooked), 3 cups flour, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1 teaspoon salt.

Mix 1 cup sugar, 1 cup lard. Put 1 level teaspoon soda in a small cup of sour milk. Add this to sugar and lard, then add dry ingredients, roll thin, cut in squares and bake. Raisins—2 cups—make an excellent addition. (2025) recent years, intelligent care of the complexion was a rarity, almost entirely limited to "professional beauties" of the court and the stage. Now the methods originated by Mrs. Adair have developed a new science of beauty, and the woman is old-fashioned indeed who does not give her skin specialized care. As none of the countless imitations of Mrs. Adair's treatments can equal the original methods in efficacy, women of discrimination choose Mrs. Adair's authentic Strapping Muscle Treatments and inimitable

"Artfur" Automobile Lap Robes

"Artfur" Robes have the lustre of genuine fur and the same indescribable softness to the touch. They are lighter in weight and are more sanitary than real fur, and are more beautiful than ordinary imitation fur.

For Christmas gifts, these robes are very appropriate. Their beauty, combined with their durability, is a continual reminder of the taste of the giver.

In response to many requests for a little booklet illustrating some of these robes, we have prepared one which we will send upon request, if you mention the name of a department store located near you.

The prices range from $20 to $100 retail.

Fabrics and robes made by

The Shelton Looms

The fur fabrics in these robes are the same as those made by us for Cloak and Suit Trimmings—the very highest grade fur plushes made.

"What have you been doing to yourself?"

THAT was the first question an American officer asked his wife on his return from France recently. In her efforts to raise funds "to keep our fighters fit," she had practised a self-forgetfulness not wholly unselfish and her husband's frank disappointment in her appearance sent her post-haste to Elizabeth Arden. If you too have become a bit haggard and neglected your complexion, better follow her example and repair the havoc by means of the infallible Arden Muscle-Strapping Treatments and

Arden Venetian Preparations

NO need to worry or experiment. Elizabeth Arden, with her experience and authoritative knowledge, will assume the responsibility for giving you the fresh loveliness you should have. If you cannot visit one of the Arden Salons, just write concerning your special needs and Elizabeth Arden will personally advise you what to do. Following are some of the Venetian Preparations which cold weather and steam-heated houses make imperative to keep the skin soft and fine of texture.

VENETIAN CLEANSING CREAM cleanses thoroughly without rubbing—an important feature, as rubbing stretches the skin. Should be used preparatory to any complexion treatment; leaves the skin soft and receptive. $1, $2, $3.

VENETIAN ARDENA SKIN TONIC—Used after the Cleansing Cream, this mild astringent refines the skin and makes it brilliantly fresh and clear. 85c, $1.75, $3.25.

VENETIAN SPECIAL ASTRINGENT—A stronger tonic, for flabby, wrinkled skins. It tightens and firms sagging muscles, reduces puffiness under the eyes and makes a woman look years younger. $3.50.

VENETIAN AMORETTA CREAM—Used before powdering, this gives the skin a lovely finish and protects it from chapping. Delightfully fragrant. $1, $2.

POUDRE D'ILLUSION is inimitable. Nothing in the world equals it in quality and color. It gives the skin a peach-like bloom. Exquisitely perfumed. $2.75.

VENETIAN ROSE COLOR—A liquid rouge that duplicates nature in its fresh, delicate tone. Harmless, waterproof, does not rub off. Cannot be detected. $1.

VENETIAN EYE SHADOW—Applied over the eyelids and at the corner of the eyes, this intensifies the color and brilliance of the eyes and increases their apparent size. Box, $1.

Mark the Preparations you wish and mail with your address and cheque or money order. Add postage, unless order exceeds $10. Write for booklet, "The Quest of the Beautiful" (new edition).

The Gift "Jonteel"

The Wondrous New Odor of 26 Flowers

FRAGRANCE of Riviera orange blossoms; scent of Oriental sandalwood; fresh purity of English lavender; mystic odor of olibanum, the frankincense of the Holy Land—all these and more than a score of others, the choicest from the whole world's garden, make Jonteel. Gathered at great expense, blended by a master perfumer and offered reverently in frosted crystal, saffron satin and black. Is any gift more to be desired—or more highly prized?

The 8000 Rexall Stores

throughout the United States, Canada and Great Britain have been given exclusive sale of Jonteel because they are linked together into a great National service-giving organization. Among them are the 200 Liggett Stores reaching from New York and Boston to Winnipeg; Owl Drug Stores of Pacific Coast; Buck & Rayner, Chicago; Marshall Drug Stores, Cleveland; May Drug Co., Pittsburgh; Scholtz Drug Stores, Denver; O'Donnell's, Washington, D. C.
